ICBC COLLECTS OLD DEBTS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corporation of British Columbia said Thursday it has begun collecting about $19 million in debts owed the company since it was established five years ago.

ICBC spokesman Bev Penhall said a list has been compiled of the names of 106,000 people owing money to the corporation and sent to the 800 ICBC insurance agents and motor vehicle branches throughout the province.

When people come in to renew their insurance, agents check for a special code number on the renewal form which indicates they owe money to the corporation.

Penhall said about half of the money owing is the result of people not paying traffic violation penalty point assessments while others used bad cheques to pay premiums.

Penhall said about 20,000 people have cleared up their debts since the program began Jan. 2. Most of the balance is expected to be paid by the Feb. 28 insurance renewal deadline.

DROUGHT BRINGS POWER CRISIS

Blackouts for Wash.?

Washington State is facing a severe electricity shortage this year and there appears to be little B.C. can do to help as it has in the past.

In Olympia, acting Energy Office chief Fred Adair warned of the seriousness of the drought-created situation.

His state agency is preparing a five-stage plan, ranging from voluntary curtailment to mandatory "rolling blackouts," for coping with any power shortages that may develop.

B.C. Hydro information officer David Robertson said today: "We are making another provincial survey right now and we may have to reduce or stop our export of power to Washington".

"We only export power after we have met the needs of all of our B.C. customers."

Echoing comments by Gov. Dixy Lee Ray earlier this week, energy chief Adair Thursday urged homeowners, businesses and industries in the state to begin reducing their use of electricity.

He said "weather and hydroelectric system conditions currently are such that a major shortfall in reservoir refill in the summer of 1979 is a real possibility.".

Adair said precipitation has been far below normal since last September, and cold weather has sapped energy supplies for months.

Schreyer congratulates Carnival Queen Christine Cantin

Schreyer Gets Boos

QUEBEC (CP) — Festivities to mark the opening of the 25th Quebec winter carnival were marred Thursday night when Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer was booed because he spoke English.

On his first official visit outside Ottawa since he was installed as governor-general on Jan. 22, Schreyer was in Quebec City specifically to open the carnival.

Addressing a crowd estimated by police at between 4,000 and 5,000, he opened in French referring to the "great success" of the carnival and complimented the seven young women named carnival "duchesses" for their "grace and charm."

Then he switched to Canada's other official language to welcome "all my fellow Canadians and Americans attending carnival events."

The reaction from the mostly French-speaking audience came in the form of booing and shouts of "Go home." Not everyone in attendance jeered the governor-general, but a substantial portion did.

Gov.-Gen. Schreyer was unfazed by the incident and his wife Lily stood by his side smiling throughout the booing, which ended when he stopped speaking.

Two years ago a predominantly English-speaking audience in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens booed the French verses of O Canada when the anthem was sung at the beginning of a hockey game.

Last fall Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan was booed when he began a speech to an Edmonton audience in French. But Thursday night was the first time anybody here could remember a similar reaction to words spoken in English.

Ironically, the governor-general had spoken hopefully of the prospects for national unity when he was sworn in less then two weeks ago. And Jacques Paradis, president of the Quebec carnival organizing committee, added yet another ironic note when he told reporters that Gov.-Gen. Schreyer had been invited to open the festivities only after the committee had tried vainly to get Premier Rene Levesque to preside.

Earlier in the day, the governor-general, flanked by members of the local RCMP narcotics squad pressed into duty as an impromptu escort, paid a courtesy call on Levesque.

The two exchanged friendly banter, switching freely between English and French and reminiscing about the days when both were premiers, before Schreyer's NDP government was beaten by the Conservatives in Manitoba.

Marchand Joins Frog Song Critics

OTTAWA (CP) — B.C. municipal affairs minister Bill Vander Zalm's song about frogs will have more repercussions in Quebec than all the constitutional amendments proposed to date, says Senator Jean Marchand.

"Do you believe that when a B.C. minister . ... at the height of the crisis, decides to compose a song about frogs, that does not have repercussions in Quebec?" the former Liberal cabinet minister said in the Senate Thursday night.

"I tell you that it has more repercussions than all the constitutional amendments proposed to date."

Premier Bennett had earlier said he wasn't concerned about the effect on his appearance at an upcoming provincial-federal first minister's meeting .

Sen. Claude Wagner, in Edmonton Thursday to address a convention of teachers on education and national unity, said, "There are some bigots who think they're funny when they're not funny at all."

Senator Marchand said the national unity crisis cannot be solved by constitutional changes as long as ethnic prejudices remain.

He referred to such things as Alberta bumper stickers saying eastern Canadians should be allowed to freeze in the dark, the booing of the French version of O Canada in Toronto and the bilingualism-in-the-air crisis of 1976.

Senator Marchand gave his impassioned address only a few hours after persons in Quebec City booed Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer for adding some English words to a French speech opening the city's annual winter carnival.

Despite a slight recovery on currency markets this morning, Canadian banks expect the dollar to fall further in the next few weeks under pressure of seasonal factors such as the winter shipping slowdown and tourist spending abroad.

A downturn in U.S. economic indicators is also threatening to push the dollar below the 83 cents mark in terms of its U.S. counterpart.

The dollar's recovery followed release of government foreign currency reserve figures.It had closed at a 46-year low of 83.35 cents Thursday.

Finance Minister Jean Chretien and Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, announced Thursday that they will appear before a parliamentary committee next week to defend government policy on the dollar.

Currency traders have complained that the government and opposition have done little to bolster confidence in the dollar in recent weeks. One analyst pointed to "petty bickering in the House of Commons" and "veiled warnings of foreign currency exchange controls."

Traders on the interbank wholesale market generally approved of the January reserve figures which showed the Bank of Canada had spent $323 million to maintain the "orderly float" of the currency. "It was much less than we expected," one Toronto banker said.

The government also announced that $4.4 billion U.S. had been spent last year, despite a drop of eight cents in the dollar's value.

Meanwhile, Mike Kelly, director of the international finance division of the finance ministry, said he has no idea how rumors got started in the last week that the department had a contingency plan in the drawer to control the flow of currency out of the country.

He said it would be difficult to find an official in the department who would recommend such a program to as a way of correcting the more than $4 billion deficit in the country's balance of payments. Chretien has denied such a plan exists.

BOYS FACE FIRE COUNT

Colwood RCMP have charged two juvenile boys with arson in connection with the $100,000 fire at Belmont High School last Sunday.

A police spokesman said today the boys were arrested at their homes Thursday night.

They also have been charged with setting a minor fire at Dunsmuir School on Jan. 9 and breaking into 13 businesses in the Colwood area in the last month, the spokesman said.

CanCel Earnings Slump

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. reported today net earnings of $6.8 million or 55 cents a share in 1978, compared with $17.3 million or $1.41 a share the previous year.

Sales rose to $175.5 million from $161.1 million in 1977.

Cancel is one of the holdings in the B.C. Investment and Resources Corporation whose shares the government plans to give and sell to the public.

The company reported earnings of $5 million or 41 cents a share for the fourth quarter of 1978, compared with $3.3 million or 27 cents a share for the corresponding 1977 period. Sales were $46.5 million, compared with $41.6 million in the fourth quarter of 1977.

Donald Watson, president and chief executive officer, said the company's performance was affected by abnormally low prices for pulp and high operating and start-up costs of a $135 million kraft pulp project at Prince Rupert.

He said all the company's wood fibre conversion facilities were in full operation at the end of the year.

Prospector Cashes In As VSE Urges Caution

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — While Vancouver Stock Exchange officials called for caution Thursday, Consolidated Cinola Mines Ltd. expressed faith in the company's Queen Charlotte Islands gold find by paying $390,000 to the man who discovered the deposit.

Nanaimo logger Ken Specogna was given the money after company directors exercised their option to buy his claim two months before the option to purchase at that price expires.

Specogna, 43, who lives in a modest middle-class home he says he doesn't plan to change or move from, said in an interview the money went straight into the bank and he is planning no major changes in his lifestyle.

Vancouver Stock Exchange officials moved to temper rumors of a modern-day gold rush, saying Consolidated's discovery needs much more work to be proved a mine.

Robert Scott, president of the exchange, told a news conference it is still uncertain how much gold can be recovered from the Vancouver-based firm's deposit.

"Caution would have to be the keynote," said Scott, adding that results from the deposit are encouraging but metallurgical, environmental and other studies have yet to be done.

Reflecting the caution, exchange officials decided not to permit resumption of trading in Consolidated Cinola stock until Monday.

Trading in the shares of Consolidated was halted last Monday after weekend reports of a gold rush to the Queen Charlottes and statements from company president Ken Sanders that the find was worth $2 billion.

When trading was stopped, exchange spokesmen explained it was to protect the investing public. Scott said Thursday that investors should not be car-

Watchdog Asks Why Prices Up

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's new inflation watchdog has asked 190 top corporations to provide it with up-to-date information on price increases and the reasons they are necessary.

The Centre for the Study of Inflation and Productivity today released copies of a letter sent to the top companies asking each to tell the centre if it implements a significant price increase.

The companies also are asked in a letter from director Robert Douglas to inform the centre of significant price changes in materials and services purchased by the company.

The announcement came as the government again faced criticism in the Commons over its admission that there is little it can do about price increases and the healthy increase in profits most industries have shown in the last year.

Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand has said in the last week he will study price and profit increases in the food and lumber industry and Bell Canada.

The government has asked both labor and business to exercise restraint to avoid setting off another round of high inflation but with the expiry of the inflation controls program, has little clout to enforce it.

Woods, Shipyards Boosted

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government is giving Canada's profitable forest products industry $235 million to help upgrade production facilities in the next five to seven years to help keep it competitive in world markets.

The government also announced Thursday in a double-barrelled package that included incentives for shipbuilding, it will work out new agreements with the provinces to improve forest management and create new stocks of wood in badly-depleted forests.

Robert Andras, president of the new board of economic development ministers, told a news conference that money will be offered to the industry on a $3-for-$1 basis to pay up to 25 per cent of new machinery for pulp and paper plants across the country.

Money will also be available for pollution abatement equipment.

But Forests Minister Tom Waterland said in Victoria today B.C.'s pulp mills don't need federal subsidies.

"Our industry last year had a very good year," Waterland said. "Judging from one year's profits no subsidy is needed.

"If, over the long term, you have to begin to subsidize industry, you are better off without them," the minister said.

However Ray Williston, president of the province's B.C. Cellulose Corp., said the federal grant could be a gift from heaven.

B.C. Cellulose operates the province's oldest pulp mill at Ocean Falls.

Williston says the antiquated mill is facing major modernisation that could amount to as much as $80 million if it is to continue operating economically.

"Believe me we're certainly interested as far as Ocean Falls is concerned."

Waterland said he would have preferred to see the federal funds slated for the West go to forest management "to get on with growing bigger and fatter trees."

"Quite frankly, I don't believe in subsidizing anything," the minister added.

The government plans to sign new agreements with the five provinces that now have joint federal-provincial programs for forest management and development and to offer to work out an agreement with B.C.

The $235 million for improvements will be allocated in this way: $90 million

Khomeini Ignores Peace Feelers

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Premier Shahpour Bakhtiar made a fresh attempt today to avoid an impending civil war by offering to take opposition members into his cabinet and open talks with his major opponent, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The holy man, ignoring Bakhtiar's peace feelers, received tens of thousands of his cheering followers who mobbed his headquarters on his second day home after exile.

He consulted with major opposition leaders and religious figures on the establishment of an "alternative government" for Iran — an Islamic revolutionary council.

Karim Sanjabi, leader of the opposition National Front, after talks with the 78-year-old religious leader, said the two million persons who celebrated the homecoming Thursday constituted a clear mandate for Khomeini to take over power.

Sanjabi, expected to be named to any revolutionary council, said that if Bakhtiar believed in democracy he should resign immedaitely.

Government sources said that despite his latest peace move, Bakhtiar, together with the army, had also made plans to immediately arrest any Iranian named to Khomeini's revolutionary council.

At the same time, an underground organization warned that anyone joining Khomeini's planned Islamic government would be assassinated.

Several thousand Iranians and foreigners, including Americans, crowded the capital's Mehrabad airport trying to escape Iran before further expected violence. The airport had been closed Thursday during Khomeini's arival.

In a related development, a Kuwaiti magazine said today Palestinian guerrillas are supplying the "Iranian opposition" with arms "in response to a request from Khomeini."

The weekly magazine Al Nahda quoted Palestinian sources in Beirut as saying that "many shipments of weapons have already been delivered" in Iran.

The sources also disclosed that "hundreds of Iranians were given military training at Palestinian bases in Lebanon before leaving to Iran," the magazine said.

The sources declined to say how the arms shipments were being delivered.

Another Kuwaiti newspaper Thursday quoted "informed sources in Paris" that Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat intends to visit Iran if Khomeini takes power.

On another front, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson told the Commomns in Ottawa on Thursday that Canada "won't allow the Americans to freeze in the dark" because of oil shortages caused by the Iranian crisis.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie, however, said later that if the United States faces shortages "in all probability Canada will be too."

Asked if this means there isn't much Canada can do to help the U.S., Gillespie paused and shrugged.

James Schlesinger, U.S. energy secretary, said this week Washington will impose oil rationing April 1 unless Iran starts exporting oil again.

No Gas Tax Exemption for Salt Spring

The Capital Regional District has no plans to exclude Salt Spring islanders from the new three-cent-a-gallon gas levy, regional board chairman Murray Glazier said today.

Earlier this week the island's five service station operators said they will be forced to close if the increase, designed to help pay capital region transit costs, goes into effect April 1.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Wednesday the decision on whether Salt Spring is icluded is up to the regional district.

But Glazier says under Section 18 of the Urban Transport Authority Act the fixing of transit boundaries is a UTA board decision.

Glazier said the UTA board had originally decided to exclude Salt Spring and other Gulf Islands from the designated public transit area but revoked that decision after recommendations made by the CRD that the entire area be designated.

That recommendation, he said, had been spearheaded by former board chairman Jim Campbell, who represents the outer Gulf Islands, on the premise that the entire regional district is a trading area.

Glazier said there had been no objections from the outer Gulf Islands residents.

Glazier said it is estimated there will be a deficit of $6 million in the first year after the CRD takes over from B.C. Hydro.

He said plans call for provision of a better connecting service at Swartz Bay to eliminate long waits and allow Salt Spring residents to leave their cars at home.

Glazier noted that Ganges residents have a $2.7 million sewer system going in which will be heavily subsidized by other taxpayers. Forty-four per cent of the capital costs will be born by a federal government grant, he added, and 73 per cent of the net deficit financed by the provincial government.

Power Running Low In Washington State

official said reservoirs in the region are down 3.5 billion kilowatt-hours worth of water.

B.C. Hydro exportedsmall amounts of surplus power during November, December and January but drought conditions have also reduced the province's supply of electricity.

The situation is uncomfortably reminiscent of electricity shortages in 1972-73 and 1976-77, said Adair.

In urging conservation, he said "a return to normal weather conditions is a situation we cannot depend on, and no additional electrical generating resources are expected until late 1979."

The agency is working on a contingency plan assigning priorities for electricity in various stages of an energy emergency.

Under 1977 legislation, there would be two voluntary stages and three mandatory stages if the governor issued a declaration of emergency.

When the region suffered from a drought two years ago, the state started to prepare, but did not complete, a contingency plan.

Exports to Washington from B.C. were moderate in November and December but far below the level of one year ago when there was a severe drought south of the border and plentiful rainfall in this province.

Sales from from B.C. to Washington from April to December, 1978, totalled $22 million, down from $65 million in the corresponding 1977 period.

the weather

A region of high pressure off shore has continued to weaken allowing a moist westerly flow over the Alaska panhandle to slip southward. As a result, cloud spread to all but the most southern parts of the province over night. Snow was also reported from the central interior and central Vancouver Island northward with rain on the outer coasts. A series of weak disturbances in this westerly flow will move over B.C. through the weekend. Each one will be accompanied by occasional precipitation and slightly moderating temperatures.

Defector's Tip Triggers Massive Bonn Spy Hunt

BONN (AP) — A tip from an East German defector has triggered one of the largest spy hunts ever in West Germany, where authorities believe at least 3,000 Soviet-bloc agents are at work.

Federal investigators say information provided by Werner Schiller, a former lieutenant in East Germany's ministry for state security, has implicated 16 Germans in sensitive posts. Ten have been arrested and four others are being sought, authorities said.

Two others named by the defector, who fled to West Berlin with his wife and daughter on Jan. 19, have been released.

The spy hunt spread to France last week and reached into Vienna Thursday when police there raided eight apartments and arrested an undisclosed number of persons suspected of being foreign agents.

Investigators in Bonn say those arrested so far include a Bavarian state politician, a senior civil servant working for the army, a West German nuclear physicist working in France and a reporter for West Germany's largest newspaper.

West Germany has captured more than 100 Communist agents since 1974, when the nation was rocked by the discovery of a Communist spy on the staff of Willy Brandt, chancellor at the time.

Brandt quit after his advisor, Guenter Guillaume, was unmasked. Guillaume is serving a 13-year term for treason.

West Germany Defense Minister Georg Leber quit under pressure early last year after authorities found a six-member spy ring in Bonn's equivalent of the Pentagon. The six, including two clerks and a secretary, are accused of channelling West German and NATO military secrets to East Germany and are on trial on treason charges in Duesseldorf.

The possible depth of the latest Communist infiltration became evident with the arrest Wednesday of Friedrich Cremer, a prominent member of the Bavarian state Parliament, accused of spying for East Germany.

WHEN GROUNDHOG CHARLIE popped out of his hole this morning for his annual weather check in Indianapolis, telephone repairman Mike Thomas apparently took over for a little work. Charlie, however, saw his shadow . . . and, for those in the know, that means six more weeks of winter ahead.

Ulster Terror Ring Broken

LONDON (AP) — Special Branch agents have arrested 36 persons in an unprecedented crackdown on suspected activists linked to Protestant terrorists in Northern Ireland, police disclosed Thursday night.

A Scotland Yard spokesman said the arrests were made in Glasgow, Aberdeen and Dumfries in Scotland and Coventry in England's midlands during the previous four days.

They gave no details of the arrests, but official sources said agents found guns and ammunition as well as documents linking the 36 with the Ulster Defence Association (UDA), biggest of Northern Ireland's Protestant paramilitary organizations.

The operation was the biggest crackdown on Protestant activists for several years. It coincided with a country-wide search for terrorists belonging to the provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Police disclosed all 36 UDA suspects were also being detained under the Prevention of Terrorism Act, which allows authorities to hold them for seven days without charge.

The sources reported two detainees in Scotland are women and four others are men from Northern Ireland, which has been torn by sectarian violence for 9½ years.

Five men arrested in Coventry, Britain's auto-manufacturing centre, are Scottish.

There was speculation the roundup was aimed at smashing a UDA gun-running operation from Scotland to Northern Ireland.

Fresh Teng Barbs Hurled at Kremlin

Times News Services

Chinese Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, working his way across the United States, continues to needle the Soviet Union.

"The danger of world war remains," Teng told a luncheon audience of Atlanta businessmen Thursday. "Hegemonism is the biggest threat to international peace and security. Historial experience tells us that peace is not secured by prayer alone.

"It is imperative to oppose and contain hegemonisn and upset the strategic plans of the warmongers. China and the United States have reaffirmed that each is opposed to efforts by any other country to seek hegemony."

China uses the word "hegemony" to describe Soviet expansionist policies.

Moscow, meanwhile, has denounced as slanderous and incendiary Teng's attacks and called on the Carter administration to clarify its own position toward relations with the Kremlin in the aftermath of the Chinese vice-premier's meetings at the White House.

The official Soviet News Agency, Tass, in a sharp riposte to Teng's anti-Soviet sallies in the past two days, noted that the White House had not separated itself from what Tass called Teng's "rude attacks against the Soviet Union's policy" during his address to Congress Wednesday.

"Many words were said from the American side" during Teng's visit, the agency noted in a dispatch from Washington.

"But these words do not indicate the attitude of the U.S. administration to the incendiary statements by the Chinese guest of the White House, to the slandering of the policy of relaxation of tension, to the condemnation of efforts, to restrict the arms race, to calls to create 'a united front against the Soviet Union.'

"All this calls for clarification. For in statements by the American side it was said that the talks with Teng revealed the existence of 'many common perspectives,' that the two sides could facilitate the attainment of 'analogous aims' and even that the sides had agreed to 'conduct regular consultations on questions of common strategic interest.'

"The Chinese understanding of perspectives, aims and strategic interest is known," the Tass report declared. "The Peking leadership orients itself at war, hegemonism, at the suppression of national liberation movements and at struggle against socialist countries."

The Soviets, until Thursday night, had refrained from significant comment on the visit of Teng to the United States. But the official press and senior Soviet sources have made clear in the weeks since full Chinese-American diplomatic relations were announced in December Kremlin alarm over possible future actions by Peking and Washington against Moscow.

Was It Very Surprising?

"Inexcusable" is the word Premier Bill Bennett used for the B.C. Federation of Labor's brush-off of an invitation to meet with the cabinet this week to discuss labor issues.

At a series of public meetings, the organization has talked about the dire effects of new legislation regarding disputes in essential services, and "words like 'bloodbath' have been part of their statements," Bennett said. He thought the leaders of the federation would be glad of an opportunity to take their protests directly to the government.

His language in describing their rejection of a meeting with the government was rather strong, but the premier's concern for keeping his lines of communication open is commendable. On the other hand, did he seriously expect an affirmative reply? Or was it just a cheap and easy way to discredit labor's campaign against the government? Offering to sit down and talk may be a sign that the government is feeling the effects of the Fed's publicity blitz around the province. Labor leaders and cabinet ministers sitting down and sensibly discussing their political differences sounds reasonable and sensible. Anyone here opposed to reason and common sense? Of course not.

The catch is the government's timing. Extending an invitation to talk now is like being asked to shake hands and forgive and forget just after you've been hit over the head with a two-by-four.

This sort of thing cuts both ways. The federation remembers its first meeting with Bennett's government in the spring of 1976, a one-sided presentation by labor spokesmen of their annual brief to government. No questions, no discussion. They were politely ushered out the door after a mere 20 minutes.

But Bennett had a golden opportunity to improve relations last fall when the federation elected a new leader — Jim Kinnaird, former official in the B.C. labor department. He used some of the rhetoric of the hardliners, but clearly here was a more flexible and pragmatic spokesman for the province's unions, someone who might try to get along with whatever government was in power. So what happened?

The province intervenes with back-to-work legislation to end a dispute that closed schools in the Kootenays. Labor blustered about it, but could live with the special act, as it lived with equally sweeping abridgements of the collective bargaining process by the NDP government. But tacked onto the bill was a paragraph amending the existing emergency services legislation to provide the government with a big new weapon — the legislature powerless to check its use — against labor in municipal and educational disputes.

This was serious enough, but to be told that this section wouldn't be proclaimed law until after careful study, then to have it quickly and quietly pushed through without explanation has pushed Kinnaird into a corner. He was left without much choice.

The premier may be annoyed at the federation's dismissal of his request for a meeting, but it can not have come as much of a suprise. Both sides have gotten themselves into political positions which will require a certain amount of unbending before a snap decision to talk sweet reason is acceptable.

Police Recruits

The Victoria police board made a good decision this week when it agreed to lift its restrictions on the age and height of recruits to the police force. Previously only persons who were between the ages of 19 and 28 could apply and male applicants had to be at least five feet, eight inches tall.

Although the minimum age will still apply (can you imagine the problems of a policeman too young to enter a pub?) the other requirements have now been lifted.

The police board members who opposed the change, Alf Hood and Janet Baird, made good points about the benefits of having young, tall police officers. They pointed out that since our community invests about $50,000 in the training of a police officer, it will get a better return on its investment from a young person who will serve the city longer before retirement.

They noted also that an influx of new, young blood makes the force energetic and responsive, and that the nature of the job sometimes requires large, strong people.

All those arguments are valid. But Hood and Baird have missed the main point. To lift the strict standards is not to say that the police force is suddenly going to start hiring nothing but 52-year-old dwarfs as its new recruits.

Those doing the hiring will still be able to choose the best applicants — and youth and a good physique, including height, are obviously going to be key criteria. As Chief Jack Gregory said, between two equally-qualified applicants, the younger, taller one will still have the edge.

What the change does accomplish is to make hiring a little more flexible. Now if a candidate with truly outstanding qualifications comes along, he won't be barred from consideration because he is 29 years old or only five feet, seven inches tall.

The average Victoria citizen will probably not see any difference in the makeup of the police force as a result of the change. The vast majority of junior police officers he sees will still be young and tall.

However, the change may mean that Victoria has one or two excellent police officers it would not otherwise have had because they would have been a little too old or a little too short to apply.

What Do Politicians Mean?

OTTAWA — Both the Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives appear confused and at each other's throats about what tack the federal government should take if the majority of Quebecers vote in favor of sovereignty-association.

Is the issue just a pre-electoral tempest in a teapot or a major controversy with dangerous implications for the survival of Confederation?

Whatever the answer, it must be remembered that Prime Minister Trudeau and Conservative Leader Joe Clark admit that both parties contain ardent federalists. Neither party would consciously aid the drive for Quebec independence.

'It Won't Be Me'

Trudeau has said negotiations with the Parti Quebecois on Quebec separation may be inevitable, yet other Liberals ridicule Conservatives for saying they would negotiate if the majority of Quebecers vote "yes" on the promised referendum.

In an interview with CTV at the close of 1977, Prime Minister Trudeau said:

"What I am saying basically is that if ever Quebecers by an overwhelming majority decide they no longer want to be part of this country, then they're going to sit down and negotiate with the rest of this country how they can be kept in.

"What I say at this point is I will not make them change their mind by force of law. I do say that somebody will have to sit down and negotiate with them and it won't be me."

John Reid, federal-provincial relations minister, believes the federal government must refuse to negotiate if the Parti Quebecois wins the referendum.

Reid expressed his opinion in an emotional attack on Conservative MP David Crombie, the former Toronto mayor who said it would be silly for the federal government not to negotiate.

"I am astonished by and in strong disagreement with Mr. David Crombie's televised statement . . . that it would be silly to refuse to negotiate sovereignty association with the government of Quebec," Reid said.

"Mr. Crombie's statement can only reinforce the impression that prominent Conservative spokesmen, including the leader of the party, do not understand the nature of sovereignty-association or the goals of the Parti Quebecois and their implications for the unity of Canada."

Clark quickly repudiated Crombie's statement by saying a Conservative government would never negotiate sovereignty-association.

Crombie then altered his tune, after the Conservatives suffered embarrassing political jibes from the Liberals, by saying he would not negotiate Quebec out of Confederation but that discussions between Ottawa and Quebec City must always continue.

"Of course we will talk with the people if the referendum which is to be held, presumably in Quebec, is passed by a majority. It is either that or allow the country to go down the tube and that is certainly not what I intend to do."

That statement only evoked another round of ridicule by Liberals, including Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve, who described the Tories as "politically naive."

Claude Morin, Quebec's intergovernmental affairs minister, says politicians in English Canada are spouting nonsense when they say they will refuse to negotiate sovereignty-association even if the Parti Quebecois government wins its independence referendum.

Dictionary Will Help

"These statements on a refusal to negotiate, no matter what happens, are about as crazy as those of a manager who tells workers who want to go on strike: 'Go ahead and strike, I won't negotiate'," Morin told the CBC Tuesday.

When the dust clears, it may turn out the Liberals and Conservatives hold identical views and that all the fuss was a semantical misunderstanding.

Jean-Luc Pepin, co-chairman of the Task Force on Canadian Unity, says the terminology associated with the national unity debate is highly confusing. To set the record straight, the task force plans to publish soon a dictionary explaining such key phrases as sovereignty association. Perhaps he will even define the word negotiation for some confused politicians.

No renewal of timber licences without a public hearing, readers say.

Not to Be Borne

The arrogance with which Tom Waterland has dismissed public hearings on renewals of tree farm licences, in particular TFL 24 on the southern Queen Charlotte Islands, is clearly at odds with the very real concern of many groups and individuals affected by the proposed logging.

Among those who support public hearings on the renewal of TFL 24 are the Queen Charlotte Islands Public Advisory Committee to the Forestry Service, the QCI Handloggers Association, Masset and Skidegate band councils, the Graham Island advisory planning committee, the Northern Trollers' Association, the UFAWU, the B.C. Trappers' Association, the Southern Moresby Wilderness Proposal Symposium of November 1977, the Federation of B.C. Naturalists, the Sierra Club, all opposition MLAs and Iona Campagnola, federal MP for Skeena.

Too many serious questions about the adverse effects of the proposed logging have been raised for Waterland to decide to renew TLFs "on the basis of what is really best for the industry." Such a criterion clearly contravenes the concept of multiple use forestry, (to which the logging industry pays no more than lip service), which is "the deliberate and carefully planned integration of various uses so as to interfere with each other as little as possible and to supplement each other as much as possible." The clearcutting methods of the large logging companies are carried out at the expense of the fisheries, the recreational user and the forest's own ecosystems. The silting up of spawning streams, the pollution of watersheds, extensive soil erosion and deterioration and loss of natural habitat for forest dwelling species and the resulting collapse of the ecosystems within which they play a part are all predictable effects of clearcutting.

Further, the industry's claim that such methods are the only economically feasible way to operate is seriously in question. Waste within the industry itself, as well as research indicating that selective logging can be as efficient, or more so, than clearcutting, with no loss of revenue or jobs, reinforce the urgent need for public hearings to examine critically these concerns.

It is not to be borne that a publicly elected official, one of our servants, should treat the people of the province as nobodies whose voices matter nothing in the disposal of our own forests. — Paddy McGrath, 308-3142 Cedar Hill Road.

TFL Renewals

We believe that public involvement in the renewal of tree farm licences is a basic issue in the managment of Crown forest land.

The first tree farm licence scheduled for renewal under the new Forest Act is TFL 24 held by Rayonier Canada Ltd. on the southern islands of the Queen Charlotte Islands. On Jan. 9, the ministry of forests made an offer to Rayonier to renew this TFL, and announced that public hearings would not be held.

This does not only affect us in the Queen Charlottes and TFL 24. It sets a precedent which will be used for all TFLs and for all of B.C. Remember that 26 tree farm licences, scattered throughout B.C. are scheduled for renewal in the next 24 months.

Public hearings are the only forum for consideration of the effects of forest management on community stability, environmental quality, and future options in forestry. Without this forum, the licence holders will not be accountable to the public and will have little incentive to manage the forests in the best interests of local communities or the province.

We urge you to join us in requesting public hearings on all tree farm licence renewals, and specifically for TFL 24, by writing to Premier Bill Bennett and Forests Minister Tom Waterland at the Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C. to indicate your support for TFL renewal hearings. — Paul George, The United People Against TFL Automatic Renewals, Queen Charlotte City.

Incensed at Unions

I have just finished reading your excellent paper and am incensed at what the labor unions are doing to Britain.

Whatever injustices they believe are being perpetrated against them, they can never ever justify this latest strike action. The country was just beginning to recover from near bankruptcy when the unions hit it again. Can't they see that by crippling their own country they are undermining their own personal situation?

It is stupidity on an obscene level. And don't doubt for a minute that the labor leaders in Canada don't envy and covet the power wielded by their compatriots in Britain. They would dearly love to have such strength. We can hand them this if we vote for their political party, the NDP, in the next election. Or we can try and prevent it by voting for someone else. The choice is ours and we cannot pretend ignorance if we disregard the vivid example Britain is showing us.

Don't think it can't happen here. We are more like them than we are to any other country, even down to our British-born union leaders. — Don Madclean, Saanichton.

Put a Little In

The enthusiasm, however misplaced, and the continued unmitigated gall of Mr. Bev Highton, president, Victoria Real Estate Board in his "to hell with the community, let's make money" philosophy, leaves me aghast.

Having recently advocated the removal of the municipal zoning policy on the grounds that our elected representatives are not qualified to serve our interests he now advocates, at taxpayers' expense of course, an advertising campaign to bring all the grandmothers and dranddads of Alberta and Ontario to Victoria (Realtors Urge Retirement Pitch; Times, Jan. 15).

Why? Well, not because he has their interests at heart and our "balmier" cimate will be easier on the old folk as opposed to the spine-chilling winters of Alberta and Ontario, but rather because without such an influx of persons easily parted from their money the Victoria housing prices will remain soft in 1979.

It would of course be unthinkable that this be allowed to happen and that those already living here and finding it difficult to meet the high prices be afforded a ray of hope, for who wants stability in housing costs — certainly not the real estate developers.

For your enlightenment, Mr. Highton, you should understand that the people and property in Victoria are not here for the sole purpose of providing you and your fraternity with a high source of revenue, and you'd be making a more positive contribution to society if you took a little less out of the common pot and put a little more in. — A. J. Broome, 2275 Dunlevy Street.

Barbaric Practice

Since my belief is that abortion is an entirely unjustified and cruel, indeed barbaric, practice and that outside of rare exceptions which only prove the rule's benignity, it should not be encouraged as it is today in Canada, I suppose I may count as an anti-abortionist the sort of person maligned in Leonard Shifrin's article Anti-Abortionists Curb Free Speech (Times, Jan. 10).

Certainly, if the Planned Parenthood Federation advocates abortion as a method of "planning parenthood," I heartily agree with MP Ursula Appolloni that it deserves to have its operating grant cut off. Imagine citizens' tax money being used for such a purpose! Barbaric isn't a strong enough word.

The "small Catholic paper", as Mr. Shifrin calls the National Catholic Reporter, is not in any sense small, either in circulation or influence, among journals devoted to religion. Nor is NCR "Catholic" in any official sense whatsoever; its editorials are mere opinion. I read the editorial mentioned and have nothing but contempt for its sophist argument. The conclusion it teaches — that the public is being led to believe "that anti-abortion is what Roman Catholicism solely stands for in the social, economic and political arena" — is entirely untrue. If the public believes that, it'll believe anything.

If one must use labels, I am an anti-abortionist who believes in free speech, although I'm thoroughly sick of the stupid whining of the anti-life fanatics who argue "women should have control over their own bodies" when what they really mean is "pregnant women should decide whether or not to have an abortion, without any sanction in law to dissuade them" — women who, by becoming pregnant in the first place, have clearly already relinquished control over their bodies, to men. — Robin Terry, 524 Dallas Road.

Waste of Money

I wish that Bill Bennett's proposed action of giving away B.C. Resources Investment Corporation shares were only a comical hollow gesture, but it goes beyond this.

The assumption that we will be grateful for receiving a share of something we already own is insulting. I will now have to make specific application to receive something worth much less than its cost to me in increased taxes. Anyone who fails to play the game will simply pay and lose.

Considerable resources will be wasted in the application for printing and distribution of shares.

The only group which will benefit from this publicly-funded sham is the public relations and advertising industry. Specifically, those firms which support the Social Credit party at election time. They will be well-paid with tax dollars to provide investment advice and party propaganda to the public. — M. Wheatley, Victoria.

Well, Just What DOES Make for Happiness?

By JANE E. BRODY
New York Times

Our Jobs?

Happiness, a favored subject of philosophers, writers and poets since the beginning of history, has only recently come under scientific scrutiny, and the results of studies thus far suggest that many traditional beliefs about it are incorrect.

The research indicates, for example, that a happy childhood is not the key to adult happiness. The data on this point, while sketchy, indicate that the influence of childhood on happiness is much weaker than one might conclude from analyses based on people who seek psychotherapy.

The better the parents' relationship, the happier the child, but the studies suggest that having parents who stay married and behave warmly toward each other matters little in detemining how happy the children are when they reach adulthood.

Many of the participants in psychological surveys who described "awful" childhoods and adolscences still grew up to be happy adults.

Forty per cent of those in one study recalled their parents' relationship as cold. "People who led very unhappy childhoods, whose parents divorced or died, who were treated coldly, who had physical and psychological problems, still manage to be happy as adults," said Dr. Jonathon Freedman, the Columbia University psychology professor who conducted the survey.

The one childhood factor that does carry over into adulthood, according to the research, is guilt. Those who often felt guilty as children are less optimistic as adults, less happy and more likely to experience fears, anxiety, insomnia, loneliness and feelings of worthlessness.

Happiness, the studies show, is less predictable than might be expected. Some people who appear to have very little reason to be happy nonetheless are, and others who have every reason for joy are chronically dissatisfied.

There is clearly no "recipe" for happiness. Indeed, the findings hint that internal biochemical factors not yet determined, or certain circumstances during the first months of life, or both, may significantly influence an individual's "capacity" for happiness.

The researchers distinguish happiness, an over-all state that includes both good and bad times, from pleasure or good mood, which are more ephemeral feelings that may be components of happiness. Unlike poets and philosophers, the scientists have not tried to define happiness, but rather to isolate factors associated with what people call happiness.

Psychologists have found, for instance, that the attainment of happiness requires a life-long and every-changing guest. In fact, Freedman, the Columbia psychologist, points out in a recently published book, Happy People, that people quickly get used to whatever they have, good or bad, and only deviations from the level to which they've adapted produce happiness or unhappiness.

Another factor influencing happiness, the psychologists say, is expectation. Those who get more than they thought they would, tend to be happier than those who achieve what they or others expected them to achieve. And unrealistically high expectations tend to bring disappointment and unhappiness with the reality attained.

Although it is not a guarantee, an optimistic outlook on life fosters hapiness, Freedman's studies suggest. In a forthcoming book, Optimism: The Biology of Hope, the anthropologist Lionel Tiger suggests that optimists tend to reinforce their positive outlook by doing things that make them feel better, whereas pessimists may see little point in seeking out uplifting experiences. However, being a pessimist or a cynic is not necessarily incompatible with happiness, Freedman said.

Perhaps the greatest mystery about happiness is the observation that some people have what Freedman calls a "talent for happiness" that others lack.

According to Dr. Willard Gaylin, a New York psychoanalyst, an essential component for a happy life is the ability to tolerate setbacks and frustrations. A happy life also involves commitment and involvement, he said, adding: "The more involved a person is, the greater his capacity for pleasure — and for pain."

Self-confidence and self-esteem are also attributes that psychologists and psychiatrists associate with a high potential for happiness. In a study of what fosters high self-esteem in children, Dr. Stanley Coopersmith, a psychologist at the University of California at Davis, found only a small relationship between self-esteem and family social status and income. What did correlate with high self-esteem were parents who set strict standards of behavior for their children, and who were consistent in enforcing the rules. Children with low self-esteem tend to be the products of permissive homes.

The bulk of the new scientific findings about happiness are described in Freedman's recent book. With Dr. Philip Shaver of New York University, Freedman conducted a survey using questionnaires published in Psychology Today and Good Housekeeping magazines. More than 100,000 people participated, volunteering opinions on the level of their happiness and the factors that contribute to it.

Although the people who respond to such questionnaires are not representative of the nation as a whole, Freedman said he found a remarkable similarity between his results and those of surveys that used scientifically selected samples. A number of these random surveys were conducted by the University of Michigan. Together, these studies have reached the following conclusions:

● The strongest predictors of happiness are social factors — marriage, family, friends and children. Though large numbers of people are getting divorced and are questioning the viability of marriage as an institution, married people, over-all, are happier than single people. For unmarried people, friends and social life are most closely related to general happiness. People who are divorced are least happy, but those who marry again are as happy as those in first marriages.

● Love is the single most important element in happiness. People without love nearly always list it as important — even poor people do not always say that money is the secret to their being happy. Love is equally important to men and women, and "lots of money, a good job, health, beauty, marriage, even sex do not make up for a lack of love," Freedman found.

● People who are happy with their sex lives are more likely to be happy in general. Nine in 10 persons surveyed said sex was important to their happiness, though not as important as love. Little relationship was found between frequency of sex and happiness, and very few people mentioned sex as one of the crucial things missing from their lives.

● Job satisfaction is surpassed only by love and marriage as being important to happiness. In one study, 70 per cent of the people who were happy in their jobs were also happy with life generally, but only 14 per cent of those unhappy with their jobs said they were happy. The factors that affect job satisfaction include interest in and value of the work, income, security, chance for advancement, flexible hours and vacation time.

● Old people are just as likely to be happy as the young and middle-aged. Although most people think the middle-aged are happiest, the surveys did not bear this out. Contrary to another popular notion, older people are not inclined to be unhappy and many of them are optimistic about the future. At different ages however, different factors are important to happiness. "You may be less happy with sex in old age but happier with religion, less happy with friends in middle age than in young adulthood but happier with your job, and so on," Freedman wrote.

● People with strong religious feelings are no happier than those without such feelings. Among those with religious beliefs, however, the followers of the most liberal traditions — for example, Unitarians, Quakers and liberal Protestants — are happier than those with stricter faiths, such as Catholics and conservative Protestants. Jews were also near the bottom of the happiness scale.

● The ingredients of "the American Dream" — education and income — matter relatively little in determining over-all happiness. Money matters a great deal to those who do not have enough to live on, but otherwise it is not very important to happiness.

● Good health does not guarantee happiness, and poor health does not rule it out.

THE ECONOMIST

SUKARNO
. . . favored big families

After dark in rural Java the haunting ning-nong of a bamboo gamelan orchestra drifts across wet rice paddies from all-night village dramas. Javanese peasants, possibly the most cultured, artistic and mystical villagers anywhere, love theatre, especially the shadow play.

Most shadow plays depict tales from the Hindu war epic, the Mahabharata. These are portrayed as an endless struggle not so much between good and evil as between base animal passions and detached self-control. The shadow play is Java's most pervasive cultural influence, setting standards of ethics and a strong respect for authority. By using it to preach new attitudes towards birth control, Indonesia's family planners have quite spectacularly lowered the rate of annual population growth in Java and Bali, from 2.5 per cent in 1970 to 1.4 per cent this year.

Now, when the elegant Hindu king-puppets return home from battling demons and find their clown-servants with too many new babies, village audiences burst into cheers and laughter as the shamed culprits hang their heads in humiliation. In just eight years of government-sponsored family planning campaigns, the Indonesians have not only set conventional demographic wisdom on its ear; they have shown how village culture can be harnessed to promote change.

Since 1970, the average rate of child-bearing among 85 million Javanese and 2.4 million Balinese has dropped more than 20 per cent. It is still falling. The proportion of women aged 15 to 44 using contraceptives have gone from nothing to almost 40 per cent and in Bali has topped 60 per cent. About 65 per cent of these take the pill (the Americans have inundated Indonesia with 1,200 million pills) and 20 per cent use intra-uterine devices.

Indonesia's over-all annual population growth rate has dropped to 1.7 per cent, raising hopes that it can be brought down to the 1.2 per cent rate of East Java and Bali by 1985.

The 13,000 islands in Indonesia's 3,400-mile-long archipelago already have 137 million people, making Indonesia the world's fifth most populous country. Some 65 per cent of these many millions are jammed into Java and Bali, where the world's highest population densities have reached the saturation point.

Under the late President Sukarno, the government was forbidden to engage in family planning. When General Suharto and his Berkeley-Harvard-trained technocrats put together a birth-control program in 1970, Indonesia's population was projected to reach 300 million by the year 2000; this has now been scaled down to 190 million.

Governor Sunandar of East Java, the province which has taken the lead in innovative birth control, feels that even this is too high; in the next five years, by averting two million births through contraception and by moving 750,000 people to less populous islands, he hopes to hold East Java's population steady at 28 million. Hindu Bali has lowered its average family size from six to three children in just seven years.

Such success has stunned world population experts because it is happening in mostly Moslem villages with few if any doctors, 40 per cent illiteracy, infant mortality above 150 per 1,000 and per capita yearly incomes of less than $200. The falling birth rate has not been accompanied by any sudden upsurge in industrialization, which is thought to be the main reason for declining rates of growth elsewhere. But some people still question whether the official family-planning effort deserves all the credit, citing the spread of traditonal birth-control methods (abstinence, herbs, massaging the uterus).

Java did not hit on its winning formula . . . (until) in 1973, a physician who ran family planning in East Java, decided that conventional clinics were getting nowhere and that transforming Javanese village culture was the key. He opened training schools for shadow-play puppeteers; he got East Java's governor to put out the word to the army, police and civil service that everybody's neck was on the line; he worked with Moslem religious teachers. Soon family planning clinics were storming east Java with gamelan orchestras, classical dancers, shadow plays, with the local authorities standing impossingly by. Suddenly contraceptive use acquired status and village women were marched in for intra-uterine insertions or to have pills popped in their mouths.

The doctor explained his conquer-by-culture campaign:

"In Java, there is a belief, instilled by the shadow play, that one must sacrifice to the spirits around one in order to achieve a harmonious existence. Who are the spirits in a Javanese village today? The police and army commanders, the village chief and the Moslem teacher. Get them on our side and we've won the battle."

Neighbors

At first his strategy stopped just short of coercion, and stirred resentment. But then the Javanese discovered what every anthropologist (but almost no development economist) knows: the most potent force in every village is neither government fist nor religious belief; rather it is fear of the neighbors' censure or "what will people say?" So family planning was plugged into existing social networks and local leaders were given responsibility for spreading it. The traditional Javanese hierarchical structure and the social pressure it brings to bear did the rest.

Children's Hollow Eyes Reflect Soviet Problem

MOSCOW — The rooms at Orphanage No. 23 are bright and spacious, the toys plentiful and well chosen. The adults who work there seem caring and warm. And still the children have hollow eyes.

Materially, there is no sense of deprivation in the three-story building in northwestern Moscow that houses 180 children between the ages of three and six. They are shepherded gently through the same program of play and learning that governs thousands of ordinary state-run kindergartens throughout the country. The difference is that when evening comes, no one picks them up and takes them home. That difference is in their eyes.

The problem of orphaned, rejected, abandoned and abused youngsters is rarely publicized in the Soviet Union, but it is a problem nonetheless, one addressed by an elaborate governmental structure of adoption procedures, orphanages, boarding schools and family investigators.

About a third of the 180 in Orphanage No. 23 have been taken from their parents by the courts, the institution's director, Fira S. Dobrovetskaya, explained; another third were abandoned and the rest either have no living parents or were given up at birth by young unwed mothers.

Moscow has 14 such orphanages, known as children's homes, housing some 2,000 children, as well as two boarding schools with 700 boys and girls aged seven to 17; while another 6,000 orphans live with relatives.

"Many people want to adopt," said the director, a veteran of 20 years in orphanages who has grandchildren of her own. "The demand vastly exceeds the supply."

Despite the demand, not many of her charges leave for families. Only about 20 left last year, she said, a figure that seems to reflect official reluctance to encourage adoptive parents to take older children. This attitude, in turn, results from a strong axiom in the Soviet Union that the child must always believe that his adoptive parents are his natural ones — an illusion usually impossible to create for a child of five or six.

Fostering the illusion is perhaps the greatest philosophical difference fom the method of adoption in the United States, where social workers often advise couples to be honest with their adopted children, to bring them up understanding that they are adopted, to avoid the trauma of sudden discovery later in life.

Here, the conviction that a child cannot handle such knowledge emotionally is so firmly rooted that the law provides for three years' imprisonment for anyone who divulges the truth to an adopted youngster before age 18. After that age, an official said, a person is usually mature enough to adjust, providing there has been solid, loving family upbringing.

Before the Judge

A 21-year-old woman who pleaded guilty in provincial court Thursday to a second breach of probation in less than a year was given her second jail term for the offence.

Enola Jean Evans, 638 Constance, was jailed for 45 days after entering a change of plea before Judge William Ostler. She was arrested on a warrant for failing to appear in court Nov. 27.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Evans was placed on six months' probation May 12, 1978, when she was given a five-month jail term for breach of probation. Conditions attached to the probation period were to remain in the jurisdiction of the court and to notify the court of any change in address.

Evans' mother notified a probation officer Sept. 18 that her daughter was leaving for Vancouver, Mulligan said.

The original offence occurred last July when Evans pleaded guilty to obtaining transportation by fraud and received a suspended sentence, six months' probation and 40 hours of community service work, Mulligan said.

Ostler questioned the mental status of a 22-year-old woman who could not stop grinning and laughing during her appearance in court.

Maria Lemmen, 1122 Collinson, changed her plea to guilty on a shoplifting charge and was remanded until Feb. 22 for a pre-sentence report.

Mulligan said Lemmen took cheese and cookies valued at $2.86 from a Safeway store at Fort and Foul Bay on Jan. 11 without paying.

Court was also informed Lemmen was convicted for the same thing Sept. 26, 1978, in Vernon and was fined $30.

After Ostler mentioned Lemmen's "entirely inappropriate behavior" Mulligan said he agreed with the judge and said Lemmen pleaded not guilty Jan. 12 when she remarked that "Christians don't steal."

June 8 was set for a preliminary hearing into a charge of possession of cocaine for the purpose of trafficking.

Barrie Paul Dale, 30, of 1322 Ivy Place, and Kathy Barbara Sharpe, 17, of Vancouver, were jointly charged Jan. 24 in Sidney.

Defence lawyer Robin Dalziel changed the election of trial method on behalf of Dale from judge without jury to judge and jury after defence lawyer Peter Freeman elected the latter method on behalf of Sharpe.

A 36-year-old man who stole a power sander from The Bay on Nov. 15 because he said he was tired of being on welfare and needed money was given a suspended sentence, nine months' probation and 150 hours of community service work.

Andrew Paul Matwick entered a change of plea to a charge of theft under $200. Mulligan noted that Matwick's criminal record dated back to October, 1959, and that his most recent conviction was Nov. 7, 1975, in Victoria for arson for which he was jailed two years.

Defence lawyer Malcolm Macaulay asked the court to note that Matwick was on $200-a-month welfare for some time and that Matwick's rent took more than half of the monthly amount. Macaulay said on the 15th of the month Matwick only had $1 left on which to live and that the theft was a "foolish and frustrated reaction to his financial situation."

He also said Matwick had never been given a chance to perform on probation during his life and he wished to have that opportunity.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: George Stephen Griffith, 50, of 10204 Third, $500; Carl Walter Newcombe, 20, of 6334 Northridge, $400; Robert Clark, 19, of 2853 Heath, $400; and William Starck, 67, of 495 Walter, $400.

Sentence Suspended For Theft Of Groceries

Andrew Duncan Jarvis, 23, of Langford was given a suspended sentence in county court Thursday and placed on probation for two years by Judge Montague Drake.

He pleaded guilty Jan. 18 to breaking and entering and theft of groceries at Capital Market, 50 West Burnside, on Feb. 17, 1978.

Gov't Writes Off Vanishing Money

The provincial government has written off $5,312.76 that disappeared from the court registry offices in Campbell River prior to 1977, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Thursday.

Wolfe didn't know what happened to the money but said action was taken to prevent similar occurrences in the future.

A large safe was installed at the registry, locked cash drawer controls were established, staff duties were changed to cut down the number of people handling money and controls were imposed on access to the registry offices.

Wolfe said the attorney-general's ministry investigated the shortages, but no criminal charges were laid to his knowledge.

"I think it was probably just general lose controls over the handling of it," he said.

Premier Pulled Flim-Flam Says B.C. Fed President

KELOWNA (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett's blast at the B.C. Federation of Labor for not attending a cabinet meeting Thursday is political flim-flam since a labor rally was scheduled here the same day, the federation's president said.

Jim Kinnaird told a federation rally organized to protest amendments to the Essential Services Disputes Act to include more public employees that it is no coincidence Bennett called the meeting in Victoria the same day as the rally here.

"We have absolutely no hesitation about going to Victoria to meet with the premier and his cabinet," Kinnaird told a crowd of 700.

In Vancouver Thursday night, Bennett renewed his invitation for the meeting.

The premier said it was obvious from the nine rallies the federation is currently holding throughout B.C. that it has something to say, and the government should hear it directly.

KINNAIRD
. . .Bennett knew

He said many Social Credit party members belong to unions and they are concerned whether they are being represented.

Speaking to the Kelowna rally, the fourth in the series, Kinnaird criticized what he called the provincial government's anti-union policies and told the government not to play games with labor.

He urged organized labor to fight any form of right-to-work legislation and described the amendments, which expand the number of public employees included in essential services legislation, as right-to-work legislation on the installment plan.

The provincial government has been using labor as a scapegoat, he said, and it is steadily eroding labor's right to collective bargaining by diluting the effect of the B.C. Labor Code through legislative changes.

"It is a tragedy in a free society when a person who cuts a lawn in Vancouver becomes an essential service," he said.

Kinnaird was one of eight speakers at the rally, who said labor should be accountable to society for its actions and that it should not be expected to knuckle under to the provincial government's anti-labor policies.

Other speakers, who included representatives of the Public Service Alliance of Canada and the B.C. Government Employees Union, urged union members to let their disenchantment with the Bennett government show in the next provincial election.

The controversial amendments expand the definition of essential services to include municipalities, public schools, universities, colleges, provincial institutes, regional districts and water improvement districts.

Under the act, the government c[illegible] to labor disputes and resolve them with binding arbitration.

The next protest rally is scheduled for Tuesday in Nanaimo.

Bennett Gives Grit A Chance

Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday he is holding off setting byelection dates in the two North Vancouver ridings until the Liberals elect a new leader.

The premier said it wouldn't be fair to call byelections in North Vancouver-Seymour and North Vancouver-Capilano until the Liberals, who lost leader Gordon Gibson through resignation, have had time to get their house in order.

The Seymour riding became vacant in September when Jack Davis resigned after being convicted of [illegible] mishandling of airline tickets.

Gibson resigned Jan. 16 in order to work on the federal campaign. He then intends to run for a federal seat himself.

Law's Long Arm Nets Trio Rescuer, Victim, Husband

COURTENAY (CP) — The victim, the rescuer and the alleged culprit all wound up in prison after a woman was thrown off a bridge and into a river here.

Police said William Victor Ritchie, 30, of Cumberland, was charged with attempted murder after his 22-year-old wife, Lena, was thrown off the bridge Tuesday. She was pulled from the water by another Cumberland resident, Joseph O'Hara.

Mrs. Ritchie, after being released from hospital, was arrested on a warrant for failure to pay a fine for an impaired driving conviction, police said. She was taken to a correctional centre in Burnaby to serve a 14-day prison term.

O'Hara also was arrested, on a warrant for possession of marijuana, and taken to the correctional centre.

Case Against Editor Postponed Indefinitely

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal has postponed indefinitely a hearing into an application by the B.C. Ferry Corp. to have a Powell River newspaper editor fined or jailed for refusing to disclose her sources.

Counsel representing Wendy Fitzgibbons, 31, editor of Powell River News, said the hearing was postponed to allow the government-owned company time to gather more information for its case.

Lawyer Donald Farquhar said the court felt the material supporting the corporation's application was deficient but he could not be more specific. He said the hearing may resume in two or three weeks.

The corporation is asking the court to rule against Fitzgibbons for refusing to disclose the source of a story about a ferry-docking collision about 30 kilometres south of Powell River last September.

The collision first was blamed on mechanical malfunction, but following an internal inquiry into the incident, the corporation fired the master of the Queen of the Islands, Captain Gerry Stalling.

The B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers' Union appealed the dismissal under the labor code.

The arbitration hearing has been adjourned pending a decision on the contempt application.

Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission

PUBLIC NOTICE

Ottawa, January 26, 1979

BRITISH COLUMBIA TELEPHONE COMPANY— EMPLOYEE SHARE PURCHASE PLAN

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission has received an application from the British Columbia Telephone Company (B.C. Tel; the Applicant) for approval of the amount, terms and conditions of the issue, sale or other disposition of common shares of its capital stock by way of an Employee Share Purchase Plan (the Plan).

The application indicates that the Plan will provide an opportunity for employees of B.C. Tel and its subsidiaries to purchase B.C. Tel ordinary shares issued from the Treasury. An offering of up to 1,000,000 shares will be made available for purchase under the Plan by payroll deduction, for a period of twenty-four months, divided into two purchase periods. The method for setting the purchase price per share under this offering will be approved by the Applicant's Board of Directors prior to the offering and will be the lesser of (1) 85% of the average market price on the last business day of each purchase period or (2) 85% of the average market price as of the commencement date of the offering which will be set by the Board. As part of the terms of the offering the Applicant may fix a minimum price at which shares will be sold to participants under the offering.

The Plan will provide a means by which B.C. Tel can raise additional equity capital. The proceeds received by B.C. Tel upon the issue of common shares under the Plan will form part of the general funds of the Company and will according to the application be used to pay for part of the Company's expenditures for the acquisition and construction of additions and improvements to its telecommunication system and to provide additional working capital.

Any eligible employee may elect to purchase one share for each full $50 of annual basic rate of pay up to a maximum of 700 shares per employee. Participation in the Plan will be voluntary and participants may elect to cancel their share purchase in whole or in part at any time up to and including the last business day of the Plan.

The full Text of the Plan has been filed with the application. The application and accompanying documents are available for public inspection during normal business hours at the offices of B.C. Tel, 3777 Kingsway, Burnaby, British Columbia; and at the offices of the CRTC, Suite 1130, 701 West Georgia, Vancouver, British Columbia or 5th floor, Central Building, Les Terrasses de la Chaudiere, 1 Promenade du Portage, Hull, Quebec.

Interventions

Any interested person who wishes to comment on this application may do so by mailing or delivering a letter of intervention to the Commission with a copy to B.C. Tel. The mailing addresses to be used are: J.G. Patenaude, Acting Secretary General, CRTC, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0N2; and R.J. Bouwman, Secretary, British Columbia Telephone Company, 3777 Kingsway, Burnaby, British Columbia, V5H 3Z7. In the case of delivery by hand, the locations listed above for public inspection of documents should be used.

A letter of intervention should clearly state the intervener's views regarding the application together with any relevant information which may be useful in explaining or supporting those views. It may also include a request to appear at a public hearing should one be held. In order to be considered, all interventions must be received by B.C. Tel and the Commission on or before February 19, 1979.

Similarly, copies of replies from B.C. Tel to any interventions must be received by the interveners concerned and by the Commission on or before February 23, 1979.

Procedures to be followed

Depending upon the nature of the comments, interventions and replies received within the time periods set out above, the Commission will determine whether or not a public hearing will be held to deal with the application. If, in the Commission's view, a public hearing is not necessary, the Commission will render a decision "in principle" on or before February 27, 1979.

Public Hearing, if necessary

If the Commission determines that a public hearing is necessary, it will take place at a time and location to be specified by the Commission. All persons or associations who will have expressed an interest in this application will be notified by the Commission should a public hearing be convened.

Such a hearing would be held to examine the details of the proposed Plan, with the exception of the exact maximum purchase price, which will be determined in accordance with the method approved by the Applicant's Board of Directors. The CRTC will render a decision in principle forthwith upon completion of the hearing.

If the Commission approves the application in principle, the Applicant will provide the Commission, on or before March 2, 1979 with the exact maximum purchase price with respect to the offering under the Plan. Provided the price, terms and conditions do not depart materially from that set out in the application, final approval will be granted March 2, 1979.

J.G. Patenaude,
Acting Secretary General.

Strikers Engaged in 'Vandalism'

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister James Callaghan said Thursday that wildcat strikes by public service workers amount to "free collective vandalism," and demanded that unions curb their pay demands.

As he spoke to the House of Commons, Britons battled the crippling effects of wildcat strikes by 1.5 million public service workers that have delayed burials, shut schools and hospitals and halted other essential services throughout the country since Jan. 22.

Callaghan's minority Labor government is attempting to hold pay increases to five per cent to curb inflation. But truckers and their employers have agreed on a pay increase of 20 per cent and the low-paid public service workers want more than 40 per cent.

Pickets turned away trucks carrying food and drugs to Central Middlesex Hospital in west London Thursday, and hospital administrator Ray Hummerston said two wards had to be closed. Patients were getting just one hot meal a day.

Workers at London's 250-bed Great Ormond Steet Hospital for Sick Children threatened a full-scale walkout for today. Administrators and nurses had already taken over the cooking and cleaning there. Volunteers and relatives of patients did similar chores at other hospitals.

The sporadic strikes in the last 11 days have forced half of the country's 2,300 hospitals to halt admissions. At Westminster Hospital in London, troops cleared away two trucks with slashed tires blocking the service entrance.

"This kind of sabotage is light years away from the true business of the Westminster Hospital, which is healing the sick," a hospital spokesman said.

A mountain of rubbish stretched 30 metres along Berwick Street in London's Soho district, prompting one resident to say: "I expect the rats will start clearing it if the weather gets much milder."

Litter Goes Better With Gift Wrapping

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press

LONDON — How to beat the garbage strike: gift-wrap your litter and leave it on the back seat of your unlocked car.

One canny householder tried that and happily finds the package is stolen every time.

But for thousands of other Britons the continuing strike by garbage collectors, and hospital orderlies and street cleaners is becoming depressing as bags of unsightly garbage pile up on the streets.

In Liverpool, an uproar is developing after health authorities concluded that should the strike of grave diggers and crematorium staff go on for a few more months, they might have to consider burying the city's dead at sea.

In Southampton, shipyard management staff — with an assist from the Royal Navy — had to sneak in at night and secretly launch a brand-new missile destroyer which had been strikebound by disgruntled workers.

And in London, a group of buyers and manufacturers from West Germany, here for the international toy fair, brought with them enough black sausage to last throughout their week-long sojourn.

To the casual observer, the British strike scene is beginning to range from the macabre, to the clandestine, to the downright funny. Take the case of the missile destroyer.

Officials of Vosper Thorneycroft shipyard had been trying to launch the missile destroyer Southampton since last October.

Members of the Boilermakers Amalgamated Union, on strike for higher pay, forced the launching to be cancelled for a second time recently.

The yard went ahead with the usual launch lunch anyway and broke the official bottle of champagne over the Southampton's bows.

That night, just before midnight, the senior management returned, seized sledgehammers and belted the blocks out from under Southampton's keel.

When the workmen returned the following morning, the destroyer was snugged up to the fitting-out berth across the River Itchen.

If they hadn't done something, a shipyard spokesman said, it would have been April before the next favorable tide.

Further north, in Liverpool, Dr. Duncan Dolton, the area medical health officer, commented on a more grim aspect of Britain's labor problems.

With the strike of grave diggers and crematorium staff only a week old, private mortuaries are full and about 200 more bodies are piling up in a disused warehouse.

It poses "an awful problem of the disposal of a number of bodies due to the state of putrefaction," Dr. Dolton said.

Members of Parliament from all major parties have been swift to condemn the situation.

Meanwhile, one British newspaper has collected a selection of strike quotations going back to Jan. 10, when Prime Minister James Callaghan, back from a tropic holiday, stated:

"I don't think that other people in the world would share the view that there is mounting chaos in Britain—please don't run down your own country."

Denis Healey, chancellor of the exchequer: "Recent industrial troubles are a hiccup in the Labor government's record of successful co-operation with the trades unions."

Union boss Moss Evans: "Crisis? What Crisis? A tremendous amount of hysteria has been built up by the press on this new terminology called secondary picketing."

Head teachers at Parsons Down junior and infant schools in Thatcham, Essex: "We cannot allow you (parents) to provide bagged meals . . . as this could be regarded as a form of strike-breaking."

Bill Astbury, chairman, Greater Manchester truck drivers strike committee: "If I cannot afford to buy food, why should anyone else have it."

A Real Cliff-Hanger of a Rescue

MELBOURNE — An Australian trapped for 60 hours in a car perched on a cliff face was rescued after a chance sighting by a police helicoper, police said today. Rupert Marsh, 41, swerved to avoid another car and hurtled off the side of a road on Tuesday. His car came to rest about half way down a 200-metre cliff face. He was unable to open the door for fear of dislodging the car. Marsh was plagued by ants and mosquitos during his ordeal and suffered from thirst, said his daughter.

TOKYO — Samusoni Bigombe, Ugandan ambassador to Japan, has described as untrue a report that Ugandan President Idi Amin is to fight a Japanese wrestler. "The story. . .that President Idi Amin of Uganda was to engage in a fighting contest with Japanese wrestler Antonio Inoki is absolutely false and a complete fabrication and tends to demean the highest office of the president of a friendly State," Bigombe said in a statement Thursday. Japanese promoter Yoshio Ko held a news conference last week to announce that Amin had agreed to fight Inoki in a martial arts bout in Kampala, Uganda, on June 10. Heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali was to be the referee.

RETFORD, England — Trevor Hart felt angry when he left jail for failing to pay alimony so the day after his release he attacked the prison with a shower of coins. He admitted in court in this northern England town Thursday that he swooped over the prison in a light aircraft and paid back the £3 (about $7) train fare he had been given in a hail of five-penny pieces. Hart, 36, who had spent six days in jail for failing to pay alimony to his ex-wife, was fined £30 ($72) for dangerous flying and dropping objects from an aircraft.

NEW YORK — Punk rock star Sid Vicious today was ordered to submit to a blood test before his release from jail on $50,000 bail pending trial on a murder charge. Vicious is accused of fatally stabbing his girl-friend Nancy Spungen in the stomach with a hunting knife. Her body was found last October 12 by police in the Manhattan hotel room she shared with the musician. Manhattan Supreme Court Justice James Leff ordered Vicious to submit to the blood sampling at the request of the prosecution. Vicious' attorney, James Merberg, said out of court that he believed prosecutors wanted to compare his client's blood with samples found in the hotel room.

LONDON — Prince Charles, 30 and still single, won't have much time for romance during the next six months if he keeps the schedule he has organized for himself. According to the prince's program, announced by Buckingham Palace Thursday, he will spend a day at 10 Downing St. with Prime Minister James Callaghan, another at the headquarters of the Engineering Workers' Union, one of Britain's largest unions, and a week in London's financial district to see how banking and insurance businesses work. "The prince feels that the importance of industry is under-emphasized in the British economy," said a palace spokesman. In between, the Prince plans five visits to Scotland, five to Wales, and will tour Hong Kong, Singapore, Australia, Canada, France, West Germany, Denmark and Switzerland.

Moonies 'Using Sex' To Trap Congressmen

CHICAGO (UPI) — Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church had blackmailed at least 100 congressmen with sexual favors and campaign contributions, professional religious cult "deprogrammer" Ted Patrick claims.

Patrick, 48, claims to have "deprogramed" about 1,600 cult members since 1971. He has served several jail sentences on charges of kidnaping cult members. But other courts have upheld his right to forcibly deprogram cultists who are minors when he acted in behalf of their parents.

In an interview in Playboy magazine, Patrick said Unification Church members told him they "bought" congressmen with money and sex through a "PR team." He said one deprogramed woman told him she had seen "a cardboard box filled with envelopes containing anything from $10 to $1,000 as contributions for Congressmen."

Moon's converts also have hired American, Korean and Japanese women to seduce Congressmen, he said.

"Whenever they (congressmen) had sex with those girls, it was taped, and then a few days later they would call them up," he said. "If they investigated this thing right, at least 100 senators and congressmen would go to jail."

Patrick said he has had no success trying to persuade the past few presidents and attorneys general to investigate such cults.

"Jimmy Carter's sister is one of the biggest cult leaders in the nation," Patrick said. "Ruth Stapleton uses all the same techniques... I'll grant you that she may be a good cult leader, but that's what she is, nonetheless."

Henry Ford Cited In $2M Cash Rakeoff from Marcos

NEW YORK (AP) — A stockholder's suit against Henry Ford II charges that he took a $2 million cash payment from the wife of Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos and a $750,000 "kickback" from a food concessionaire.

It alleges he deposited the illegal funds in Swiss banks and a Liechtenstein trust.

Court papers filed this week and obtained Thursday also describe how Ford allegedly misused Ford Motor Co. funds to create an unparalleled lifestyle for himself, his "close friend," Kathleen DuRoss, and members of his family.

Company funds were used, the papers allege, for plane trips for his mother's dogs and cats and for a $2.7-million spiral staircase in the company's headquarters to provide access from his private dining room to a "suite kept available for his afternoon rest."

The stockholders, represented by lawyer Roy Cohn, are seeking $50 million in damages. The new charges are contained in a document of more than 100 pages filed with Justice Arnold Fraiman in Manhattan Supreme Court in reply to interrogatories filed by Ford lawyers seeking the basis for earlier charges by the stockholders.

The document charges that Marcos' wife, Imelda, gave Ford $2 million in cash during a visit to Michigan in return for the promise that the company would build an auto parts plant in the Philippines.

The papers also charge that Ford made a "sweetheart" deal with the Canteen Corp., which has an exclusive concession to provide food and beverages in all Ford offices and factories.

Holmes Strikes Again In Canadian-Made Film

TORONTO (CP) — After 134 films in 76 years, it seems that even the most dedicated Sherlock Holmes devotees would reach their saturation level.

But when a movie about the legendary British detective reaches the calibre of the latest offering, Murder By Decree, which made its world premiere in Toronto on Thursday, the public probably will never tire of the exploits of Holmes and his faithful companion, Dr. Watson.

The film, a $5-million British and Canadian co-production, finds Christopher Plummer as the brilliant criminologist and James Mason as Watson on the trail of the notorious mass-murderer Jack the Ripper.

John Roberts, Canada's secretary of state, attended the opening of the film, the most ambitious financial project to date of the Canadian Film Development Corp.

Roberts told the opening crowd, which included Plummer and the cream of the Canadian entertainment business, that the production marks an attempt by the corporation to make Canadian films that can compete in the international market.

Nothing To Cheer About For The Cowgirls

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dallas Cowgirls are not happy about the porno film Debbie Does Dallas, now playing at a Broadway theatre, and they went into court to try to have the movie banned.

The precision group of cheerleaders, who lend a contrast to the beefy Cowboys professional football team, said the 18-year-old star of the film wears a uniform virtually identical to theirs. But, the suit says, her "explicit and lewd" sexual antics on screen are most un-Cowgirl-like.

In addition, the suit claims that the film was made without the authorization of the Cowgirls and violates trademark laws.

Part of the hard-core porno film was shot on the campus of Pratt Institute in Brooklyn during last summer's recess, and officials of the school have expressed themselves as "terribly embarrassed."

"They told us they wanted to make an educational film on the library, how it is operated, how the reference library works, et cetera."

The Unfunny Network Bids for the Last Laugh

Scott's World

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — NBC is a chronic also-ran behind ABC and CBS in the ratings race, principally because the network has no regularly scheduled weekly situation comedies with millions of faithful viewers.

It has few enough weekly dramatic shows with staunch followers.

Viewers, generally considered creatures of habit, like to tune in the same show on the same night of the week and know what to expect.

ABC and CBS have been enormously successful at block programming one hit show after another. The viewer simply locks his set in on one channel and settles back with a six pack for the evening.

With Fred Silverman at the helm, NBC is attempting to improve its Nielsens. CBS and ABC reached the top spot under Silverman's guiding hand in years past.

To buttress NBC's standing, Silverman appointed Brandon Tartikoff west coast program chief.

Tartikoff is responsible for NBC's four new sitcoms, Brothers and Sisters, Sweepstkaes, Turnabout and Hello, Larry which made their debuts last week. All were in the bottom 50 in the ratings.

NBC traditionally has been the network without a sense of humor. In recent years most of its sitcoms — notably excepting Chico and the Man and Sanford and Son — failed to survive more than a season or two."

Tartikoff is the first to admit that NBC hasn't had a funny bone.

"CBS has 10 sitcoms on the air right now," he said. "ABC has 13. Until this month we've had only one, really, Diff'rent Strokes. We hope that just one of our four new series breaks through.

"If that happens, we can incubate a third situation comedy sandwiched between Diff'rent Strokes and the new show that makes good. Then we can take the new show from a parasite position and make it a parent.

"The failure rate for any series is high," Tartikoff said. "Only one of every nine shows makes it as a series.

"Comedy is the greatest gamble of all. It's much tougher than drama or TV movies. You must catch lightning in a bottle the first night or it's all over.

"Historically, NBC really hasn't known how to evaluate comedy. Everybody's sense of humor is different and unpredictable. When a new show does make good, it takes four episodes to see who the stars will be and which characters the writers will write for.

"Our problem at NBC is that we don't have identifiable people. So we've started a massive talent search.

"NBC would like to have three hits out of our nine sitcoms going into next season. I look at it this way. NBC hasn't had a hit comedy in four years. I would be a hero if I came up with just one."

Cracking Computer Fun But Worrying

By JULIET O'NEILL
Canadian Press

OTTAWA — On Friday nights at the University of Waterloo, Ont., there is a free beer for the student who made the most impressive security breach that week in the campus computer network.

It's all in fun and the information obtained by cracking one of the 95 computer systems is trivial enough — another student's assignment for example, says Eric Manning, the computer science professor who tells the story.

"But the same hardware and software is used elsewhere," Manning said in an interview Thursday after watching a brief exchange on the issue of government computer safeguards in the Commons.

Manning is a constituent of Perrin Beatty, Progressive Conservative MP, who quoted him in the Commons about the need for safeguards in the government computer network and for reduced use of Social Insurance Numbers to guard against "massive invasions of personal privacy."

Public Works Minister Judd Buchanan replied that the government has been investigating the subject of restrictions on further links between government counters.

And Bud Cullen, minister of employment and immigration, reiterated that he has asked a department advisory council to study the use of SIN numbers.

Outside the Commons, Beatty and Manning said the use of SIN should be pared back to bare necessities such as the unemployment insurance program and the Canada Pension Plan.

And they called for a toughened privacy law that would prohibit the transfer of information on individuals around government unless the individual gives "informed consent."

Beatty's use of Manning's visit to Parliament Hill was the latest twist in a months-long campaign by the Conservatives against widespread use of the SIN.

But both men stressed that it is the computer machinery, not the SIN itself, that provides the opportunity for governments to invade the privacy of its citizens.

Manning said that with increasing use of computers by government there is an increasing chance of links with non-government computers, too.

And, for the record, he said the Waterloo students who find loopholes enabling them to crack campus computer systems must then come up with ways to prevent it from happening again.

"I don't think there are evil officials sitting around at night building dossiers on people," Manning said of his concern about government computer links.

But with more computers holding more information, dossiers gradually build up over time, especially if and when the information is linked.

Carrying the cradle-to-grave use of SIN to its extreme he said teams of experts in front of different computers "could update your movements moment by moment: There he goes to get gas for his car, now he's stopping at the liquor store, now buying flowers, going into a house, coming out at 4 a.m. with his tie askew."

Some people may trust the government enough not to worry about all this, thinking I've got nothing to hide, but, said Manning, "at least give the individual a choice."

CHILLY PROTEST ON HILL ENDS

OTTAWA (CP) — The chill hunger and endurance protest of a lone woman on Parliament Hill ended abruptly Thursday night.

The woman went home in a taxi, two days after vowing to remain by the Commons door until she got satisfaction in her call for action against three Quebec judges she said were corrupt.

Witnesses said that some individual, perhaps an MP, ordered a taxi for her, saying she was not in fit shape to continue her protest.

Lucille Dube has been picketing the Parliament Buildings daily since this session of Parliament started in October, rain or shine.

Ms. Dube, from neighboring Hull, Que., lost her case against a contractor who worked on her house through a successsion of courts. She says certain judges are corrupt and demands that Prime Minister Trudeau take action.

Classroom Dispute Lands in Court

OTTAWA (CP) — A classroom dispute, with echoes of the divisive bilingualism-in-the-air crisis of 1976, was brought to Federal Court of Canada Thursday.

Michel Monette and 14 other French-speaking students at a federal school for air traffic controllers at Cornwall, Ont., complained in November they were being discriminated against because of the almost exclusive use of English in the classroom.

Two months later Monette was suspended for what the administration termed "a negative attitude."

The 31-year-old Montreal man appeared in Federal Court Thursday seeking an injunction permitting his return to classes until the school reviews his case.

George Hynna, Monette's lawyer, told reporters the school has agreed to review his case, but as the review could be lengthy, an injunction is necessary so the student does not miss more classes.

The case, being heard by Mr. Justice A. A. Cattanach, continues today.

Should Monette be refused re-entry to the classroom, his lawyer has prepared a statement of claim seeking $250,000 damages.

The story goes back to November, 1978 when the 15 French-speaking students complained to Max Yalden, official languages commissioner, of discrimination.

Yalden's office investigated their complaints and reported the school is "surprisingly insensitive" to French-language students.

An investigation by the transport department concluded in early January there was no intentional discrimination against the French-speaking students although they were at a disadvantage because the courses are offered only in English.

Birth Control Pioneer Dies

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Alvin Ratz Kaufman, an industrialist who reluctantly became a pioneer in the field of birth control, died Thursday at the age of 93.

Kaufman, the founder of Kaufman Footwear Industries and several allied firms, opened a birth control information clinic in 1929 when the Depression caused layoffs and pay cuts for his Kitchener, Ont., employees.

By the mid-1930s, his clinic, the Parent Information Bureau, was distributing birth control information and supplies across the country.

He became involved in a landmark court case when Dorothea Palmer, a social worker at his clinic, was arrested and charged with offering contraceptives for sale, advertising methods of contraception and possessing contraceptives. Her trial started in October, 1937.

On March 17, 1937, after Kaufman had spent $25,000 for legal fees, she was acquitted.

Referendum Bill Passes Hurdle

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal referendum legislation crossed its first major hurdle Thursday as the Commons granted approval-in-principle to the bill following five days of emotional debate.

The Liberal majority, backed by the New Democrats, beat back Progressive Conservative and Social Credit opposition by a vote of 117 to 70 as the bill received second reading in the 264-seat Commons.

The Commons standing is Liberal 135, Conservative 97, New Democrats 17, Social Credit 9, Independent 5, vacant 1.

However, the proposed law that would allow national votes on constitutional questions is expected to run into more roadblocks during detailed study by an all-party committee.

Conservative spokesmen indicated they will seek amendments in committee to prevent what they fear could be widespread government abuse of the measure.

The government says the bill was introduced to provide an additional weapon in the fight to prevent Quebec's separation.

But the Conservatives, joined by Quebec-based Social Credit MPs, argued that the wording of the bill is so vague that referendums could be held on such diverse topics as Indian rights and freedom of the press.

The Conservatives said they would support a bill dealing only with the planned Parti Quebecois referendum on sovereignty association.

John Reid, federal-provincial relations minister, concluded the debate by assuring opposition MPs that a referendum under the bill would amount to little more than "a glorified public opinion poll."

Alta. Cities Get Boost

EDMONTON (CP) — Years of pressure paid off for Alberta municipalities Thursday with the announcement by Premier Peter Lougheed that $1 billion in provincial surplus will be used to virtually wipe out local government debt loads.

The move could reduce property taxes by 10 to 20 per cent—as much as $100 a year for some taxpayers

While civic officials across the province welcomed the move, opposition leaders said the announcement was a pre-election bribe and had been stolen from their policy proposals.

"It's fantastic, a great move," said Edmonton Mayor Cec Purves.

"I think the timing indicates we're getting pretty close to a 28-day election and that's fair ball," said Opposition Leader Bob Clark.

"But Albertans carried this debt load one year longer than they had to," he added at a news conference, saying said he proposed an identical scheme one year ago.

NDP Leader Grant Notley said although the measure is welcome, it should have been included in a long-term scheme for sharing revenues from the province's multi-billion-dollar resource industry.

"The province has bought the municipalities a fancy meal when a steady nutritious diet is required," Notley said.

He added that his party announced a similar proposal in a policy statement three weeks ago.

A provincial election announcement is expected soon, possibly within one month.

The money will be distributed to all rural and urban municipalities on a $500-a-resident basis to pay off debts that cost more than eight per cent in interest—about 90 per cent of all municipal debts.

Edmonton and Calgary each will get about $250 million. Other centres with smaller debt loads will have their debts erased entirely with money left over—in some cases millions of dollars—for other projects.

The money comes from Alberta's general revenue surplus of almost $2.5 billion, not from the $4.5-billion Heritage Savings Trust Fund, Lougheed said.

Create a summer job-we'll share the cost.

EMPLOYERS — Here's a chance to add the summer staff you'll need to get those extra jobs done. You provide a worthwhile work experience for a young man or woman this summer and the Province of British Columbia will share the cost of wages with you.

You'll be working with the Ministry of Labour to create summer jobs that provide opportunities for B.C. students and unemployed youth to learn work skills. It's a simple system that requires a minimum of paperwork yet lets you help yourself and the economy in a positive way. British Columbia businesses of all kinds and sizes can benefit. Once your application is approved, you're free to hire any eligible young person or take advantage of the Ministry of Labour's computerized referral service to locate an employee with the talent and interest you require. But act today. The program is available for a limited time only. Should your situation change in the meantime, you are under no obligation. Here's how it works:

BUSINESSES AND FARMS — If your business or farm has been in operation for at least a year, the Ministry of Labour will help you pay the wages of up to five young people this summer. We will pay between $1.30 and $2.50 an hour as our share of the cost.

SOCIETIES — You are invited to apply for funding for any worthwhile project that provides an opportunity for young people to learn valuable job skills this summer. Tourism Information Centres that meet the standards established by the Ministry of Tourism and Small Business Development are also invited to apply for funds under this program.

HOW TO APPLY — Applications for funding are available from any Provincial Government Agent, Ministry of Labour Office or one of the B.C. Youth Employment Offices listed below.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE AND THE CONSTRUCTION WORKER

'That's a Pretty Cold Bloody Answer'

The federal government's move to tighten the purse strings on unemployment insurance benefits is viewed as insensitive by the construction trade unions.

They see it as a broad-brush measure by a government which doesn't understand the circumstances of those affected by the fiscal screw-tightening.

In particular, they are concerned about the impact of the reduced benefits and the lengthening of the requalifying periods.

These and other changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act, which will reduce or eliminate benefits for thousands of jobless, were passed by MPs and became law just before Christmas.

The cutbacks were condemned by some federal politicians as cruel, niggardly and penny-pinching but supported by others as a reasonable and humane way to achieve necessary financial restraints and to stop abuses of the unemployment scheme.

The 400,000 members of construction unions in Canada fall in with the critics.

They feel the changes will have a particularly harsh effect on them because most employment in their industry is of a short-term nature.

And that is in normal times.

Things are not normal now, with the industry in a slump and unemployment in B.C. among those in the construction business about 33 per cent.

The jobless rate is about 30 per cent for Vancouver Island and as much as 40 per cent among the 3,500 workers represented by the Vancouver Building and Construction Trades Council.

Council secretary-treasurer John Schibli said in an interview the unemployment problem is beginning to hit the mechanical trades, traditionally able to stretch out their work over the year.

Now, for example, there is about 15 per cent unemployment among the sheet metal workers on southern Vancouver Island.

"When they have 10 to 15 per cent unemployment, you can be certain the rest of the industry is in real bad shape," Schibli said.

He said the problem is the federal decision-makers don't seem to understand the nature of the construction business.

"Our people rarely quit their jobs," he says.

"Their jobs run out."

The Building and Construction Trades Department, which represents 15 affiliated unions, made a submission in November to the labor manpower and immigration committee and asked at that time to have the construction industry exempted from the longer qualifying periods.

Schibli says Manpower Minister Bud Cullen's response to that suggestion was that it would be too much hassle.

"That's a pretty, cold bloody answer to a human problem," Schibli says.

The trades department said in a brief that frequent unemployment is the normal lot of most construction wage earners.

"It is not unusual for a construction tradesman to be employed on several different jobs during any 12-month period by several different employers with periods of unemployment of anywhere from a few days to several weeks or even months in between those jobs," the brief says.

In a normal year, the construction workers average about 1,350 hours of work, which is roughly two-thirds of a year's full employment.

"At present, because of the state of the economy, there is an alarming proportion of people who rely on construction work, who are far below their normal income and are desperate for employment."

The trades department estimates that at least 13,500 construction workers will be prevented from getting back on unemployment insurance as a result of the recent changes. That figure could double if the current slump continues.

Schibli says with the upcoming changes, the average, steady worker who has settled in the community and, in the past, has been able to get by is going to feel the pinch.

Some of the unemployed carpenters in the area are already running out of unemployment insurance benefits, he adds.

So what are the unions going to do about the situation?

Schibli says the crunch probably won't come until the employees really start to hurt as a result of the changes.

"The members will raise hell and then the unions will have to do whatever they have to do."

Times Staff

Two Changes To Really Sting

A raft of changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act were passed by Parliament in December but not all of them have come into effect because of the extensive administrative changes required.

For those in the construction industry there are two amendments which affect them the most — one came into effect Jan. 7 and the other will likely be implemented toward the middle of the year.

The one in place now is the reduction in benefits.

Effective Jan. 7 claimants began receiving 60 per cent of their average weekly insurable earnings, down from a straight two-thirds.

This change means someone getting the maximum $160 a week has now dropped to $144 week.

The change not yet in effect is an extended qualifying period for those re-entering the labor force.

The qualifying period now is 10 to 14 weeks, depending on the rate of unemployment where the claimant lives.

Because of a high jobless rate, Victoria's period is now 10 weeks. The upcoming change will add another six weeks maximum to that period depending on the claimant's work record.

For the construction worker this means he will likely have to find a job that is going to last a minimum 16 weeks instead of 10 if he is going to get unemployment insurance.

'Real Nick' This Time

The current construction industry slump is even hurting those who have been more or less fully employed for the last 15 years, a situation which was reinforced in an interview with a Victoria-area carpenter who wished to remain anonymous.

His story also illustrates what effect the extended qualifying period for unemployment insurance is going to have on workers like himself.

This individual began working as a cabinet maker in 1963 and, aside from short periods when he was laid off, worked steadily until 1970. He then took some time off for travel and returned to the job market in late 1970.

Times were a little lean for about a year and then he began to keep quite busy.

In 1975, when many in his trade where beginning to feel the job pinch, he "lucked out" and got a job with a company that lasted two years.

He was laid off from that project in October, 1977. He was called back to work last February but that job only lasted until March 3. He has been unemployed ever since.

He cautions that those in the construction trades shouldn't cry too much during the current slump because when times are good they are really good. For example, when he was working he would get one cheque during the month for about $900 and another for $700.

But coming at this particular time, he says, the unemployment insurance changes are going to be tough on construction workers.

"At this time, it will take a real nick out of people."

He says there may be three projects in the Victoria area which will last more than four months. "It is mostly all small stuff."

Those who are going to be hurt the most are the ones who made big investments during the wine-and-roses days and are now having to make do with a reduced unemployment insurance cheque which will only come in for a year.

He said as a result of the tough times, a lot of union members are working for non-union companies just to keep the wolf from the door. He did it himself and made $1,000 less a month than he would have on a union job.

Some are working for as little as $5 an hour compared to the union rate of $12.

Brian Horn has bounced around

Digging, Scratching

John Florussen, a carpenter, has been unemployed since last August.

It is the first lengthy jobless stretch he has faced since he began working in the trade in Campbell River in 1966.

He finds he can manage on his monthly unemployment insurance cheque — recently reduced to $144 from $160 — as he doesn't have a big mortgage to worry about and his three children are now married.

But the situation is harder for others, with monthly house payments and growing families.

They are getting desperate, digging and scratching for whatever work they can find, union or non-union.

Others have to face the prospect of going on welfare, not a morale-boosting measure to have to take.

"I wouldn't do it," he adds.

His son is also a carpenter and he has been forced to go on welfare.

Florussen, 56, came to Victoria in 1968 and worked fairly steadily for some of the bigger construction firms.

His last job was on the Harbor Square project on Government Street. It lasted for three years, coming to an end for him last August.

Florussen questions the wisdom of reducing the insurance benefit.

He says he wouldn't mind paying much more a month when he is working in order to be able to get more out of the pot when he needs it.

Work Here, Work There And Then Comes Layoff

Brian Horn is a 25-year-old apprentice carpenter who has been bouncing around the local construction scene for about six years and seems to illustrate the difficulty of getting long-term employment when times are tough.

He's worked with a number of firms since he graduated from the industrial trade program at Victoria High, some of them union some non-union.

He has worked short stints on so many projects he has trouble keeping the dates and time-periods straight.

He worked four months here, eight months there and then the job runs out and he is laid off.

His latest work period, with a short time when he was laid off, went from July, 1978 to Oct. 9. He had to quit then because of a mountain-climbing accident which injured his back.

Horn says the recent unemployment insurance changes are going to throw a lot of construction workers on welfare.

"It is going to destroy the construction trade, destroy people's willingness to work," he says.

He adds that he is lucky because he's young and has no big commitments.

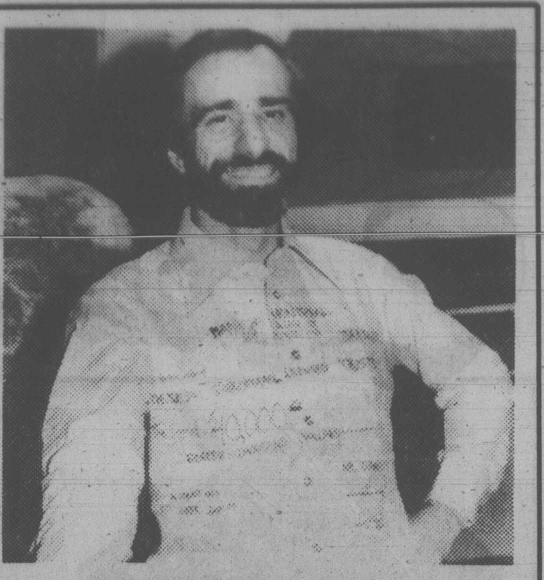
Man Loses His Shirt At Fun and Games



TORONTO (CP) — Peter Statner's three-year struggle to keep his insolvent games shop in the black came to a successful end, but he lost his shirt anyway.

To remove his store from bankruptcy, Statner (right) wrote a $40,000 cheque to the Bank of Montreal on a gold-colored shirt and turned it over to a bank official.

Last year, his creditors agreed to accept an amended settlement proposal, giving them 33 cents on the dollar for their claims against Mr. Gameways Ark.

Statner said he intended to give creditors 40 $1,000 bills, but the bank was unable to find so many large bills.

He said the midtown store's problem should have been solved a year ago but a fire hit the shop and its adjoining games club just before Christmas, 1977. But creditors continued to support the shop and supplied merchandise that enabled the company to survive.

Statner, 48, sold encyclopedias when he came to Canada from Britain in 1954. Before opening the games shop, he operated a wig business and a chain of fashion boutiques.

The building into which he moved had been a post office, then a theatre. Starting with less than $20,000 capital, he spent $100,000 renovating it.

He lost his shirt because he started with insufficient capital, spent too much money renovating a landlord's premises and did not exercise rigid financial control of the operation, he said.

Hike Air Inspectors' Pay $10,000 - MP

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative party's labor critic called Thursday night for a wage increase of at least $10,000 a year for government air safety inspectors, about twice what the 400 persons are threatening to strike for.

John Fraser of Vancouver said in the Commons the government must make that substantial increase if it is to live up to its belief that public service salaries should be comparable to those in the private sector.

The inspectors, all qualified pilots, have been without a contract since 1975 and are expected to shortly be in a legal position to strike to back wage demands of 20 per cent over base salaries ranging from $20,000 to $25,000.

Fraser said if the government believes in comparability with the private sector it must raise the inspectors' salaries to at least the $35,000 average pay among small independent aircraft companies.

If the wages were brought up to the Air Canada or CP Air average they would reach between $42,000 to $45,000.

The MP said the air inspectors, completely responsible for the safety of civil aviation in Canada, are victims of grave injustice. He said the government is offering a 5.7-per-cent increase, about $1,425 a year. Inspectors were leaving government service in large numbers.

He said he believes in government spending restraint but this situation is shameful.

Grit MP Holt 'Confused' — Sauve

OTTAWA (CP) — Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve has brushed off Liberal MP Simma Holt's demand for the minister's resignation over plans for a CBC television station in Victoria.

Mme. Sauve said outside the Commons Thursday that Mrs. Holt seems confused about the minister's powers and has misunderstood a Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) decision on cable TV in British Columbia.

Mrs. Holt's attack arose from a CRTC decision last week approving a licence for a CBC television station to broadcast on full power in Victoria when it can provide seven hours and 10 minutes of local shows.

"The CRTC determines who is going to have a licence," Mme. Sauve said. "I'm precluded by law from interfering in these decisions."

Mrs. Holt seems to feel if the CBC is allowed to broadcast out of Victoria some American television stations will be bumped off cable TV locally, the communications minister said.

But the CBC is unlikely to broadcast out of Victoria because budget cuts will probably prevent the network from meeting the CRTC target of seven hours and 10 minutes of local programming, Mme. Sauve said.

If it does begin broadcasting, the CRTC has said it will consider applications by cable TV operators in Vancouver for exemptions from carrying the Victoria CBC outlet, the minister said. That meant the American channels wouldn't be bumped of local cable TV systems.

"She didn't understand the decision," the minister said. She added she has written Mrs. Holt explaining the situation.

Subaru Recalling 1977-78 Cars

OTTAWA (CP) — The firm which distributes Subaru automobiles in Canada is recalling its 1977 and 1978 models for carburetor modifications, the transport department announced Thursday.

A department spokesman said Subaru Auto Canada Ltd. of Toronto is recalling 5,270 of the Japanese-made vehicles because of possibile carburetor icing in cold weather.

The company is sending letters to owners who will be able to take their cars to local dealers to have the modification work done, the spokesman said.

for Quebec, $46 million for Ontario which announced its own incentive program Thursday for the industry, $60 million for the Atlantic provinces and $39 million for the West.

In addition, discussions will be held with B.C. to work out ways of assisting plywood and lumber mills in the southwestern part of the province.

The program is aimed at ensuring the forestry industry, which contributes about $15 billion annually to the economy and earned $8 billion in exports last year, remains competitive with new plants in other parts of the world such as those in the southern United States.

NDP leader Ed Broadbent, attacked the program in the Commons even before it was officially announced.

He said the industry, which recorded increases of profits averaging 150 per cent last year, should plough it back into investment instead of taking government handouts.

Andras conceded at a later news conference that industry profits have been high in the last year, but said they are lower than the industrial average for 10 years before that.

The increase in profits is temporary because of the recent drop in the Canadian dollar.

"The industry is enjoying good profits and good cash flow but it is not in good shape," Andras said.

Many mills are obsolete and unless the industry is upgraded, it would have a tough time competing on world markets.

"That would do serious harm to the Canadian economy," he said.

The announcement by Andras was the first major announcement of his new board of economic development ministers, made up of ministers from the economic departments.

Andras said he plans to hold monthly news conferences to unveil economic development programs. He said there still is about $135 million in the budget this year to be allocated for industrial development programs, part of a $300 million expenditure announced by the government last fall.

He said the government decided to move first with the forestry and shipbuilding industries because work had just been completed on the studies for those industries.

On the shipbuilding front, the minister said that the federal government will spend $173 million in the next three years to launch shipbuilding yards into a more specialized and repair-oriented industry.

To help boost sagging employment in the yards, Ottawa will immediately call tenders for the construction of a new icebreaker, ferry, fisheries patrol vessel, seven search and rescue craft and the refit of the navy supply ship, HMCS Preserver.

The 20-per-cent shipbuilding subsidy will be extended until the end of the year, Andras said. It was to have ended Wednesday.

And the government will support the construction of a floating dock for Burrard Yarrows Corp. in Vancouver, the lengthening of the dry dock at Saint John, N.B. and the building of a 4,000-ton syncrolift at the Canadian National drydock in St. John's, Nfld.

Top Burrard Yarrows Corporation officials were delighted today to hear that the ship building subsidy will be extended to the end of 1979.

E.J. Jones, senior vice-president in Vancouver, described the extension as good news that would help the west caost industry.

Don Challlinor, general manager of the corporation's Victoria division, explained that the 20 per cent subsidy applies to construction of any vessels, Canadian or otherwise, in Canadian yards.

He cautioned, however, that the lack of a long-term plan was not helping the shipping industry.

"The lack of a long-term policy makes it very difficult to plan ahead. With a long-term plan more money would be ploughed back into the industry by companies," he said.

At the end of 1979, the shipbuilding subsidy will likely be cut to 10 per cent and the money saved used in other approaches to modernizing the industry.

Gold Fever Cooled

ried away by enthusiastic talk of a gold rush.

Based on engineering reports and assay results, Scott said, the deposit contains 6,000,000 tons of gold-bearing rock with an average 0.07 ounces of gold per ton.

He said, however, the figures simply were mineralization that may be present.

"Until detailed metallurgical studies are completed, it is unknown how much of the contained gold can be recovered," a stock exchange statement said.

"The property requires a great deal of additional exploration, metallurgical, environmental and mining studies before the existence of an economic mineral deposit can be determined."

After reports of the discovery, Scott said he had calls from as far away as Europe inquiring about the "gold rush."

Company officials remained firm in their conviction that the deposit will be a mine.

William Thompson, a director of Consolidated Cinola and a past president, argued that the ore should bring returns of $20 a ton with expenses only taking half that amount.

He said public interest had focused on Consolidated Cinola because of the high price of gold, now more than $200 an ounce.

Assistant museum curator Jim Haggarty says that archeologists know where to look for the submerged habitations along B.C.'s rugged coastline

THE EVER-FLUCTUATING SHORELINE

Village Artifacts Deep Secret

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

A Victoria archeologist says remains of Indian villages dating back to the days of the ancient Egyptian pyramids may exist in the sea along the coasts of Vancouver Island and the mainland.

Jim Haggarty, assistant curator of the Provincial Museum, said archeologists have a pretty good idea where these submerged ancient human habitation sites might be located.

"I think there is evidence that indicate habitations along the previous shoreline of the coast," he said. "But we have yet to uncover a site to prove it."

He said human habitations along the shoreline were submerged over a period of many years as the sea level rose.

But in some areas, the sea dropped significantly so that today there should exist some evidence of human habitation on higher ground.

"It was a slow process and the habitations gradually moved to higher ground as the sea inched its way up or were left on higher ground as it dropped," he said.

A Queen Charlotte Islands Haida village — when it first came in contact with Europeans in 1774 — was on the shoreline. Today the village is 300 meters inland.

He said studies conducted on the Victoria shoreline indicate that between 12,000 and 13,000 years ago the sea dropped by about 80 meters. In the next 3,000 years it rose to its present level.

In the 4,000 years after that the sea level dropped again, eventually to come back to its present level.

Haggarty said during the past 5,500 years sea levels have not fluctuated significantly along the east coast of Vancouver Island, but have been perhaps a few meters below the present.

"There is plenty of evidence of this," he said. "An archeological site on Galiano Island is now partially inundated at high tide. It contains material 3,160 years old. North of Victoria there are tree stumps 1.5 meters below high tide that have been dated at 2,040 before the present."

Haggarty said searching for remains of ancient submerged habitations opens up a new field of archeology.

"The question of whether artifacts still exist remains to be seen," he said. "It is still very much of a mystery."

He said techniques for searching for underwater habitations present no problem.

"We have developed these techniques in searching for wrecks," he said.

Haggarty graduated from the University of Victoria as a biologist. But he became so interested in the past and in people that he went on to study anthropology. He has been assistant curator of archeology at the museum since 1971.

He has taken part in some major research programs and has served as director of the Hesquiat archeological project on the west coast of the island. The latter involves members of Indian bands who have been researching their history.

30% Increase In Island Power To Avert Crisis

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Vancouver Island's power supplies are low but there is a light at the end of the tunnel, a B.C. Hydro spokesman said today.

New equipment at the Duncan substation will go into operation by month's end, boosting Vancouver Island's power supplies by 30 per cent.

This should meet all of the Island's needs for the foreseeable future.

The equipment, installed on a DC cable from the mainland, will add up to 240 megawatts of power to the existing transmission of 750 megawatts from the Tsawwassen lines.

The new valve equipment is already installed but must be tested before the additional power can be received. The equipment doubles the capacity of the line, which has been transmitting about 240 megawatts of power.

Power supplies are low, but not critical on the Island due to the low level of the reservoirs. The new power from the mainland means Vancouver Island will be less dependent on its local supplies.

In addition, B.C. Hydro has announced it will move ahead its schedule for a second transmission line to bring electricity from the Duncan area to Victoria.

One 500,000-volt line is being constructed on a right-of-way for completion this fall and survey work will begin immediately for a second 500,000-volt line in the same right-of-way.

The second line was not due to start until about 1985 but B.C. Hydro moved up the schedule by five years because of increased power demands in the Victoria area and to assure safety of supplies.

Victoria had several power failures over the winter, associated with storms.

Some additional clearing in the existing right-of-way will be required to hold the second transmission line.

Tower footings for the second line will be constructed in 1980 with the towers going up after that work is completed.

Conductor stringing will be completed in 1981 and the second line should be ready to go into service by fall of that year.

The existing transmission line from Duncan carries 138,000 volts. The two 500,000-volt lines will each be energized at 230,000 volts to begin with. This will be increased to full capacity of 500,000 volts each by 1990.

Glaziers Picket Crystal Project

Disgruntled glaziers working on the Crystal Garden restoration project set up an informational picket line today to bring attention to a continuing dispute over jurisdictional matters.

Members of the Glaziers Union Local 1527 have been protesting throughout B.C. over the past week because they say their trade is slowly being eroded by the awarding of glass installation work to other craftsmen.

At the Crystal glaziers are protesting the award of what they consider traditional glass installation work to carpenters.

In Vancouver union business agent Finn Hilberbrandt said he was unaware of the Crystal picketing.

But he said it didn't come as a surprise because glaziers everywhere are fed up with the jurisdictional problem.

He said the union executive has had trouble getting the membership to return to work after an illegal walkout last week.

"The issue that caused the walkout is still unresolved. Meanwhile the executive here is trying to keep a lid on the situation," said Hilderbrandt.

"A lot of people feel that if this situation is allowed to continue there will not be a glaziers' trade in a year."

He said the union is trying to resolve the dispute through talks with the employers' council and the Construction Labor Relations Association.

Personnel Job To BCBC Man

Brian Mader of the B.C. Buildings Corporation has been named Victoria's new personnel director.

Mader fills the vacancy created last year when Terry FitzPatrick was fired.

Mader, 37, will be in the same $30,000-a-year salary range as FitzPatrick.

Mader has been working for the BCBC in the labor relations and personnel relations field since May 1976.

He graduated from Dalhousie University in personnel/labor relations.

City council is expected to ratify his appointment Thursday and he will start his duties in about a month.

More than 50 applications were received for the job.

Shots Fired in Chase

An 18-year-old man has been charged with dangerous driving following a police chase in Oak Bay early today during which shots were fired.

He will appear in provincial court.

A police spokesman said an officer on patrol spotted a car speeding in the 900-block Beach at 5:05 a.m. and when he tried to stop the vehicle, it sped off.

The chase followed a 6.4-kilometre route winding through the residential areas of Oak Bay and Fairfield at speeds exceeding 100 km/h before the car went into a skid near Fairfield Plaza.

The officer nosed his car into the front of the vehicle and the driver jumped out and fled.

The spokesman said the officer called out for the youth to stop then fired three rapid shots into the air.

The youth stumbled and fell and the officer caught him.

The spokesman said during the chase Victoria police were alerted and sent six cars to the area.

In addition to the dangerous driving charge the man also has been charged with driving while his licence is under suspension.

Student Got 10 Minutes at the Top

TOWN TALK

When Neil Riley, a Grade 10 student at Stelly's High School wants the answer to a question he goes to the top.

Neil was preparing for a debate on drinking and driving and sought information on B.C.'s Counter-Attack program.

His teacher Chris Harker suggested he try someone in the government and undaunted Neil picked up the phone and called Premier Bill Bennett.

Bennett wasn't in, the secretary said, but she'd try and get the information for him. But a couple of days passed and there was no answer so Neil tried again.

This time Bennett was there, Neil was put through and after a 10-minute conversation a happy Neil emerged with all the answers he needed.

It's too bad the heritage preservationists in Saanich didn't consult their neighbors at Victoria city hall before embarking on a heritage restoration job.

They might have found that such municipally-initiated projects have a nasty habit of gobbling up taxpayers' money.

Some years ago the city decided to restore an old Victoria West mansion called Roslyn House.

What started out as the expenditure of a few modest thousands steadily expanded until, as each additional request for funds came along, aldermen would groan and roll their eyes ceiling-ward.

Now much the same sort of thing seems to be happening with Dodd House in Saanich.

The Heritage Advisory Committee has been told that $13,500 has been spent already and at least another $8,000 is needed for such things as plumbing, electrical upgrading and sewer hookup.

Memo to somebody in authority at that other paper: You really ought to cast an eye over those letters to the editor before they appear.

Otherwise T.A. Philpott, 13 Coronation Chambers, an address which is sometimes found in Duncan and other times in Hunstanton, England, is going to do himself a mischief laughing.

Philpott on the surface appears to be an expert, ahem, on Sir Thomas Crapper, the inventor of the flush toilet.

In his latest letter on waste disposal (it appeared Wednesday morning), Philpott went to incredible lengths about the royal plumbing at Sandringham.

That anyone could take it seriously is funny in itself.

That the letter should be given top play on the letters' page with a headline reading: Royal Flush After Death is hysterical.

To whoever was responsible for letting the letter get in, write 1,000 times that T.A. Philpott is a four-flusher . . .

A full page ad carried in both daily papers in Victoria twice in the past month is causing a flap at the Better Business Bureau office.

Manager Bill Tindall says he's received numerous calls about the ad which offers, for a mere $10, a guide to "the lazy man's way to riches."

The ad was placed by California entrepreneur Joe Karbo who apparently has run similar ads in numerous papers and magazines throughout North America.

But Tindall warns the ad simply promises a booklet on self-improvement and such information is readily obtainable in the library free.

Grating Experience Taking Toll of Bicyclists

Bicycle riders may have to contend with road-hogging drivers, gravel shoulders and potholes to get around Victoria but they are unanimous about the worst cycling hazard in town — storm drain grates.

There is a particularly bad stretch of the wheel-grabbing devices on Rockland Avenue between Moss and Government House.

Ordinarily the slots in the grates are wide enough to spill a 10-speed but these grates are too small for the holes and there are gaps at the side two and three inches wide.

The city ought to replace the grates, or make the holes smaller. Otherwise, bike riders unfamiliar with the road will end up with uniquely shaped wheels, and some souvenirs of the road indented on their heads.

STATISTICAL BACKFIRE

Physician heal thyself . . .

During the last few weeks he has been issuing information and warnings on the Russian strain of flu that's hitting the area.

You guessed it.

On Monday the good doctor's name was added to the list of those attacked by the virus.

The Provincial Capital Commission is looking for someone with a superior green thumb and so far has had no shortage of applicants.

PCC director George Giles said more than 30 have applied for the job of chief horticulturist for the Crystal Garden.

The Crystal is in the advanced stages of a major renovation project which will turn it into a tropical garden.

GRABBING POSSESSION of ball, touring University of Sydney, Australia, dominates this play in international exhibition rugby match Thursday against University of British Columbia Thunderbirds at Macdonald Park. It proved to be one of the few times the Aussies were on top of things, however, and Thunderbirds went on to claim 21-7 victory. Robbie Greig scored two tries to spark the T-Brids over the Aussies, who topped University of Victoria Vikings 37-3 in match earlier this week.

SIX FROM VICTORIA ON NATIONAL TEAM

Twelve British Columbia players, including six from Victoria, have been selected to the Canadian national amateur team which will meet the United States squad in an international match at Vancouver's Empire Stadium on Sunday.

The 20-man Canadian roster is expected to provide the nucleus of the team that will represent Canada in this year's Pan-American Games.

Goalkeeper Ted Van Waes, defender Danny Lomas and forward Peter Zachary, all of the University of Victoria Vikings; Victoria West mid-fielder John McGuire; forward Dan Hood of Victoria Athletics, and Dave McCaig, a Victorian under contract with Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American (professional) League, are the Vancouver Island players named to the national lineup.

Sunday's match kicks off at 3:30 p.m.

Late Downhillers Favored For Once

VILLARE-SUR-OLLON, Switzerland (CP) — Switzerland's Peter Mueller won a men's World Cup downhill ski race Thursday in which half the racers finishing in the top 16 were among the last group in the field of 48 starters.

Normally the top placings are the domain of the top seeds — the first 15 — who get on the course before it is cut up and becomes a menace to those following.

Mueller, 21, edged Austrians Leonhard Stock and Werner Grissmann after finishing second in three of seven earlier World Cup downhill races this season.

The 3.18-kilometre course grew faster when the sun came out after Mueller's descent and allowed many unranked skiers to come near his winning time of one minute 45.96 seconds. Strong winds also hindered the early starters on the course with its 770-metre vertical drop.

While Mueller started eighth, Stock got away 23rd and Grissmann 15th and both had better intermediate times than Mueller. Stock finished in 1:46.19 and Grissmann in 1:46.20.

For the first time this season, no Canadian was in a challenging position. David Murray of Abbotsford had the best showing. His 1:47.89 tied him for 22nd spot with Sepp Buercher of Switzerland.

Ken Read of Calgary was 30th in 1:48.48, Dave Irwin of Thunder Bay, Ont., 34th in 1:48.61, and Steve Podborski of Toronto 38th in 1:48.87.

Canadian men's coach John Ritchie of Grand Forks said the European World Cup season ended on a course that was "more or less a disastrous joke."

Podborski, the fifth starter and the first Canadian, said there was a strong wind at the top "blowing the snow around and blowing us off course."

Despite his poor showing here, Podborski likely will rise to the top 10 world downhill skiers in rankings to be released next month just before the start of the North American section of the World Cup tour at Lake Placid, N.Y.

"It wasn't a fair race," said Ritchie. "For the top seed skiers it was windy at the top and slow at the bottom. Then it got so warm it was even fast in the flats and there was no wind at the top."

The results seemed to confirm Ritchie's assessment. Schmazl started 36th and Cozzio 43rd.

The results dropped Read to 12th from 11th in the overall World Cup standings and into a fifth-place tie with Austrian Uli Fpiess in the World Cup downhill table, both with 57 points.

Ritchie feels the team, rated tops in the world after the first few races — will return to its early-season form March 2 at Lake Placid.

Murray agreed, saying he would be able to relax at home while competing in the Canadian and U.S. nationals. The Canadian championships are at Lake Louise, Alta., Feb. 15.

The final World Cup race of the season will be at Murray's off-season home course, Whistler Mountain, March 9.

Meanwhile, in Spital, Austria, Heidi Reidler of Austria won her second Europa Cup downhill race in as many days earlier today and Canadian skiers again performed strongly, placing four girls in the top 10.

Reidler covered the 2,700-metre course in one minute 57.23 seconds, more than a second ahead of Torill Fjelstad of Norway. Ann Blackburn of Chicoutimi, Que., was third in 2:00.22, just ahead of Loni Klettl of Banff, Alta., who was timed in 2:00.47.

Laurie Graham of Inglewood, Ont., was seventh and Marie Dufresne of St. Sauveur, Que., was ninth.

Brown Resigns As Nugget Pilot

Times News Services

Larry Brown, citing health reasons, relinquished his duties Thursday night as coach of Denver Nuggets, and assistant coach Donnie Walsh was named interim coach for the remainder of the season.

Walsh joined the National Basketball Association team as an assistant in August, 1977.

At an emotional news conference, Brown said, "I've been trying to stick with the coaching duties in spite of my physical condition, but I really feel it's best for the team and myself that I step down and work to get back on my feet."

Brown, 38, declined to be specific about the nature of his physical problems. But he said he had "been experiencing some pains for the last 2½ to three months and I was a little concerned."

"I had a checkup today and the doctor said I've got some tension problems — which is an NBA coaches' disease."

Brown, who was in his fifth season as Denver's coach, had a 272-158 record.

He decided not to exercise his option to coach the Nuggets in future years.

Denver was an American Basketball Association powerhouse in Brown's first two years of coaching, and the team won Midwest Division titles in its next two seasons in the NBA. But the team has struggled this season and currently sports a 28-25 record, trailing division leader Kansas City by 3½ games.

Arksey Rink Sets Schoolboy Pace

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bob Arksey of Clearwater was the only undefeated rink Thursday after two rounds in the British Columbia schoolboy curling championships in nearby Port Moody.

Meanwhile, in New Westminster, Patty Jennings, of North Vancouver, and Karina Dzuiba, of Kitimat, were tied for the lead with 2-0 records in the girls' division.

Arksey defeated Guy Corrigan of Fernie 9-3 and Allan Blackmore of Quesnel 8-6.

In girl's play, Jennings beat Kerry Randle of Mount Douglas 15-2 and Linda McFarland of Chilliwack 8-4 while Dzuiba defeated Diana Cook of Carson Graham of North Vancouver 9-5 and Judy Tweedie of Centennial, 9-8.

Both bonspiels continue today.

Vikings Have a Score To Settle With Visitors

The team that besmirched UVic Vikings' otherwise spotless record in the Canada West University Athletic Association men's basketball league this season is at the McKinnon Gym this weekend.

Lethbridge Pronghorns handed the Vikings their only loss in 12 league starts on Nov. 25, an 83-73 jolt after UVic had won the previous night's encounter 96-68.

The teams, along with UVic Vikettes and Lethbridge women, renew rivalry tonight and Saturday. The women's games begin at 6:45 both nights followed by the men at 8:30.

Vikings, who maintained their third-place national ranking this week and confirmed it with an 85-78 exhibition win over Simon Fraser Clansmen, are healthy and coach Ken Shields is determined there won't be a repeat letdown.

"They've already shown us we can't afford to make any mistakes," he said.

Pronghorns, third in the Canada West standings, two games behind second-place Alberta and four back of the Vikings, need at least one victory to keep their playoff chances alive. The first and second-place teams meet in a best-of-three series in a month.

Vikettes, who remained seventh in national rankings this week despite a two-game split last weekend against Saskatchewan Huskiettes, have injury problems.

Star centre Jane Favali is still sidelined with a knee injury but coach Kathy Shields hopes she'll be back in time for the playoffs Feb. 23 and 24. Her replacement, Sue Shaw, has been a standout but missed Tuesday's 53-52 overtime win against Simon Fraser because of flu. Michele Belanger also was ill but played anyway.

Vikettes (10-4) are second, two games behind Calgary and two ahead of third-place Alberta with six games left in the schedule. Lethbridge is fifth with a 5-9 record.

'Concentrate On Our Own'

HAMILTON (CP) — If they had their druthers, the general managers of most National Hockey League clubs would prefer to concentrate on beating each other and let the Russians skate on their own side of the pond.

But while a few owners — notably Harold Ballard of Toronto Maple Leafs — agree, NHL president John Ziegler says international hockey is here to stay.

The Hamilton Spectator polled the GMs of the 17 NHL clubs and found 14 of them opposed to exhibition games against touring European clubs. Six said they could have done without next week's Challenge Cup series in New York between the Soviet national team and the NHL All-Stars.

"We should be concentrating on our own teams and our own league and selling our own sport," said Ted Lindsay of Detroit Red Wings, the most vocal opponent of international play.

"We're closing down our league for the whole week. The players who should be practising aren't going to be practising. They'll all be in Florida. When they come back, we'll be cheating the public because they won't be in shape."

Jim Gregory of Toronto was concerned about the possibility of injuries to key players.

"What do I do if we lose a player in one of those games?" he asked. "If a player got hurt and missed six or seven weeks, that's the end of the year."

Fred Shero of New York Rangers said he would favor the Challenge Cup if it were held evry four years and the team had time to prepare.

Stops Not Shots Make Difference

Times News Services

National Hockey League opponents keep getting a lot of shots at Atlanta goalies, but Flames coach Fred Creighton isn't worried.

"This preoccupation with the number of shots is widespread throughout the league, but I'm more interested in those that go in the net," Creighton said Thursday after just one of 34 Vancouver Canuck shots got past backup goalie Rejean Lemelin in a 4-1 Atlanta victory. It was Lemelin's third vicory of the season.

Atlanta has won four in a row, and five straight on home ice.

"I think he has confidence now and confidence is a big factor in any sport," Creighton said of Lemelin. "We got good goaltending early when it is so important."

Vancouver scored first at 7:20 on a power-play goal by Jere Gillis, who knocked a rebound past the sprawling Lemelin.

Early in the second period, Bob MacMillan deked Vancouver goalie Gary Bromley out of the net and flipped in the puck for his 26th goal of the season.

Meanwhile, if the last-place Philadelphia Flyers played as hard as they were defended by coaches past and present, they'd probably be the best team in the NHL.

And after the Flyers lost 4-1 Thursday to New York Islanders, new coach Pat Quinn accepted the responsibility.

"I couldn't have asked for a better effort," said Quinn, who was promoted from the Flyers' Maine Mariners of the American Hockey League.

The "effort" extended the Flyers' longest non-winning streak (0-5-4) in nine years. The Islanders, leaders of the Patrick Division, scored three third-period goals to snap a 1-1 tie.

In other games, Boston Bruins trounced Chicago Black Hawks 6-1 and Minnesota North Stars whipped Detroit Red Wings 6-1.

Quinn talked about the booing of the home fans, and second guessing of the media. He at first used the phrase negative press, which he retracted after being reminded that the Flyers have received the best press over the years of any team ever to play in Philadelphia.

"Let's put it this way," Quinn said, "the expectations set for this team at this particular time are high."

Quinn said he put in a new system of moving the puck Thursday morning and it was too much to expect it to work so soon.

"I came here with some ideas and decided we might as well get started tonight," Quinn said. "One of the problems is the players are trying extremely hard, they become very anxious, then their minds don't function as they should."

He said he would have to work on restoring the players' confidence.

Virus Checks Cougars

Brad Yachimec, a winger brought up from Sherwood Park Crusaders of the Alberta Junior Hockey League, will be sticking with Victoria Cougars for at least another game.

Yachimec, who showed promise Wednesday night in New Westminster when Cougars dropped a 3-2 Western League decision to Bruins, is expected to dress for a Saturday game against Billings Bighorns in Memorial Arena.

Game time is 8:30 p.m.

Four Cougars are on the injured list and a virus prevented wingers Greg Adams and Bob Jansch from working out Thursday. Both, however, are expected to play against Billings.

Victoria remains in third place in the Western Division, three points behind Bruins and 23 behind leading Portland Winter Hawks.

In the only league game played Thursday, Saskatoon Blades and Medicine Hat Tigers battled to a 3-3 deadlock in the Alberta city.

Rod Van Slyke scored at 5:44 of the third period to give Tigers the tie.

Brian Keates and Curt Broadhead scored the other Tiger goals while Bill MacNaught (2) and Blake Stephen replied for Saskatoon.

Blades, who outshot Tigers 37-34, were ahead 3-2 after the second period and the teams played to a 1-1 tie in the first 20 minutes.

Saskatoon took seven of the 12 minor penalties.

OUTDOORS
stewart lang

Fishing for salmon and steelhead remains just a shade short of bleak just about everywhere around Vancouver Island.

But there are the inevitable exceptions to the rule.

John Bellis was one of the fortunate salmon fishermen. He landed a limit of chinooks (a 10, an eight and two five-pounder) Tuesday while trolling a green and white hootchie off the mouth of Sooke Harbor.

Most of the chinooks caught off Sooke range from four to six pounds and have been taken on hootchies trolled either alone or rigged over a minnow with about 100 feet of line and two pounds of weight.

Becher Bay waters are yielding a few chinooks to 17 pounds on hootchies or Squirts trolled close to the bottom between Frazer Island and Bedford Island.

Chinooks to eight pounds and fewer numbers of bluebacks to three pounds form the catch from the Pedder Bay kelp bed through to Whirl Bay. Best success was noted on bait and hootchies trolled with 100 to 150 feet of line on a downrigger.

Fishermen are also picking up some fair catches of chinooks off the Victoria waterfront.

"Mostly grilse" was the word from Oak Bay, where a few hardy fishermen have connected on hootchies and bait trolled deep off Trial Island and The Flats.

Rumors are floating around Sidney that some fairly hefty chinooks may be heading for Fairfax Point waters from the vicinity of Pender Island. Some good catches have already been taken off Fairfax — Tom Davis landed a limit topping off at nine pounds on strip Sunday.

Another spot to try might be near the Red Can between James Island and Sidney. That's the area where John Salvador landed two weighing 12:08 and eight pounds on Squirts the same day.

Peter Larsen topped fishermen working off Deep Cove with a 10:08-pounder taken Wednesday with strip and a downrigger off Wain Rock but a majority of the fish are blues to four pounds. Satellite Channel is producing part of the return.

Spotty catches of chinooks to six pounds are reported in Finlayson Arm.

Nanaimo fishermen are really scratching to pull in a few chinooks to six pounds using 200 to 300 feet of line on a downrigger off Winchelsea Island.

Chinooks to eight pounds are showing off Rainy and Holford bays at the mouth of Alberni Inlet but the fish are moving around a lot.

Waters between Union Bay and Denman Island as well as off Comox Bay have yielded a few chinooks to eight pounds. Trollers and drift-fishermen have picked up catches close to the bottom.

Campbell River fishermen are landing a few chinooks in the seven to nine pound range trolling red and white flashtails or bait between Indian Bay and Willow Point.

Steelheaders are still experiencing the doldrums brought on by a combination of freezing weather and lack of rain.

The only steelies reported recently — and not in any significant numbers — have been taken from the Cowichan, Big Qualicum, Quinsam and Salmon systems.

NIBBLES: Chuck Thomas won the recent Sidney Anglers' Association Frostbite Derby with a chinook that tipped the scales at 11:04 . . . A total of 22 fish were weighed in.

Rookies and old hands in need of a refresher course will be interested to hear the Victoria Canoe and Kayak Club has another basic paddling skills and canoe safety course slated.

The club has rented the Crystal Garden pool from 7 to 9 a.m. on Sundays Feb. 18 and 25 and March 4 and 11. The course is restricted to 20 people and costs $20 per person.

Those taking the course must either own or make arrangements to borrow a canoe, paddles and a PFD (personal flotation device). They should, naturally, have swim suits.

There will also be two outdoor sessions in addition to those in the pool.

This course is always a popular one so if you're interested you should phome Fred Potter at 652-2446 to make sure you're on the list.

Frank Johnsom is arranging a sortie around Sooke Harbor this Sunday, starting off from the Sooke River Flats park about 10:30 a.m. Give him a ring at 479-5729 for more details.

Craig McInnes, former editor of Yellowknife's News of the North will give members a treat when they attend Tuesday's meeting, to be held at 7:30 p.m. in the hall of St. Martin's-in-the-Field Church on Obed.

Craig will show some of the 700-odd slides he took on a 600-mile canoe trip down the Thelon River, from the eastern end of Grest Slave Lake, past the area where debris from the Russian satellite landed.

Musk ox, grizzly bears, cariboo and other northern animals will be seen.

Having flown over that area aboard an armed forces Argus surveillance flight, I still remember the unique beauty of the north. I remember, too, looking out of my hotel window in Yellowknife and being surprised to see a lone small boat making her way across a great expanse of water.

Waters off Sidney will be full of activity again on Saturday when members of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club resume racing after a recess since the New Year's Day Rum Race. The six-miler will begin at 1 p.m. in the area off the givernent wharf at the foot of Beacon.

The club's Catalina 27 fleet got together for a 7½-miler on Sunday, the winner being Roger Vale's Temenos. She was followed by J.P. Le Dallic's La Marquise, Gerry Guest's Auriga, Jim Carvath's Cat Nip, Herb Roberts' Bijou a Moi, Bill Sargent's Southern Comfort, Gordon Cooper's Toybox, Lou Townsend's Maggie Ann, Phil Sumsion's Aqua Sulis and Jack Watts' Jubilee Blue.

Laser sailors of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club will have series racing at Cadboro Bay on Saturday, starting at 1:30 p.m.

Wendy McBride won the first of three races sailed on Saturday, runners-up being Bob and Jim. In the second race it was Jim, Dave abd Bob in that order while the last time around the buoys Jim led the fleet, followed by Dave and Barry Wright.

RYVC's cruising class boats will have another long-distance race on Sunday, starting at 10 a.m. in the vicinity of Flower Island at Cadboro Bay. Many of them took part in the Turkey Head Sailing Association's two around-the-buoys races last Sunday.

Winds of between seven and 15 knots and bright sunshine provided idealic conditiona for the two races, the first of which was won by Gary Cooney's Hocus. After her came Jack Foster's Sherlock, Soren Isbrand's Danish Pastry, Kim Olsen's Toogooloowoo, Dennis Robinson's Coeo, Bill Craig's Ailsa Craig, Rod McBride's Lemolo, Bill Sloan's Desire and Andy McBride's Helios.

The second time around it was Sherlock, followed by Danish Pastry, Sandy McMillan's Amber Green, Ron Jewula's Beo Wulf, Ailsa Craig, Desire, Toogooloowoo, John Dewey's Shuttlecock, Coco and Bruce Klaver's Wings.

Eric Hiscock, the British sailor whose books on his wanderings around the world have enthralled thousands, will be giving another talk and presentation of color slides this coming Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the North Saanich School at the corner of Resthaven and McDonald Park Road in Sidney.

The presentation, which is free, is being sponsored by the Saanich Peninsula Power Squadron and School Board District 63.

Haas Avoids Letdown

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Jay Haas, fearful of a protracted letdown in the wake of a debacle at San Diego, birdied three of his first four holes, then cozied his way to a four-under-par 68 and a tie for the first-round lead Thursday in the $300,000 Bing Crosby national pro-am golf tournament.

Haas, who had rounds of 84-77 in defence of his title at San Diego last week, played well in mild, cloudy weather at Pebble Beach and shared the No. 1 position with Australian veteran Graham Marsh and Mike McCullough, both of whom were at Cypress Point.

"It may have been an advantage playing at Pebble today in relatively good conditions," said Haas. "It's like a sleeping giant. It can play 10 shots harder when the wind is blowing."

The pros play one round on each of three Monterey Peninsula courses before the final 18 holes at Pebble Beach on Sunday.

Gil Morgan, a non-practising optometrist, veteran Bobby Nichols and Mac McLendon were a single shot out of the lead at 69. Morgan, the No. 2 money-winner last season, ruined what could have been a pace-setting effort with a double-bogey seven from the water on No. 6 at Pebble Beach. Nichols played his last nine holes, at Cypress Point, in 30. McLendon also was at Cypress.

Tom Watson, who used Crosby titles as the springboard to player of the year honors the last two seasons, scored an eagle three at Cypress Point, but could do no better than par-72.

George Knudson of Toronto was three strokes off the pace with a 71, including a back-nine score of 34. Jim Nelford of Burnaby had a 35-37—72, while Dave Barr of Kelowna shot a 41-36—77.

CAUTHEN ENDS SLUMP

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Steve Cauthen, the 18-year-old Triple Crown-winning jockey who had fallen into a deep slump, broke his losingstreak at 110 races Thursday with a victory in the fourth race at Santa Anita.

The win, aboard Father Duffy, ended the dry spell that began Jan. 2. Father Duffy covered the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:464-5 on a muddy track. There were seven horses in the race for four-year-olds and up.

Father Duffy was in a stretch run with Vaslov when the two bumped. Vaslov appeared to tire after the contact. The stewards posted an inquiry but ruled that the two horses were equally at fault in the minor collision and took no action.

Father Duffy paid $7.60, $3.80 and $2.40. Vaslov, under Marco Casteneda, was second and paid 3.80, 2.60. Latin Touch, under Darrel McHargue, was $2.40 to show.

It was Cauthen's third race of the day. His mount in the first race was scratched. He finished dead last in the second and did not ride in the third.

Cauthen rode Affirmed to the Triple Crown last year.

More Gold for Preston; Victoria Pairings Trail

Baier, 14-year-old sister of Sherri Baier who last year teamed with Robin Cowan to win the senior pairs title, and the 15-year-old Eisler performed a strong free-skating program to win the event over Preston clubmates Becky Gough and Mark Rowsom.

The Preston club, led by coach Kerry Leitch, won its first gold medal Wednesday when Rosemary Barth and Keith Davis took the novice pairs title.

Baier and Eisler topped the final results with seven ordinals—meaning all seven judges placed them first—and collected 94.92 points.

Gough and Rowsom placed second with 16 ordinals and 88.68 points.

Only five couples contested the junior pairs event with Mary Joe Fedy and Tim Mills, also of the Preston club, finishing fourth and Vanessa Howe and Jeff Mawle of Victoria fifth.

Earlier Thursday, defending champions in three senior events placed well in compulsories, leaving some challengers with a lot of catching up.

Conspicuous among the contenders was Vern Taylor of Toronto, an exciting, athletic free skater who put himself in a hole by finishing last in the men's singles compulsory figures.

Defending champion Brian Pockar of Calgary topped the figures, leaving Taylor with a lot of ground to cover if he is to catch up in the short program tonight and the free skating program Saturday.

Dennis Coi of Vancouver, another strong free skater who was tabbed as a strong challenger to Pockar, was also in poor position, placing seventh in the figures.

Other defending champions in good position were Lorna Wighton of Toronto and John Dowding of Oakville, Ont., who took a big lead, confirming the opinion of experts who say the dance couple is in a class by themselves.

There was a closer fight in women's singles, as expected. Deborah Albright of Toronto had a narrow lead over Janet Morrissey of Ottawa and defending champion Heather Kemkaran of Toronto.

Charlene Wong of Montreal, the 12-year-old surprise leader in junior women's singles after Wednesday's compulsories, fell back in Thursday's compulsory short program and Kay Thomson of Toronto took over the lead.

There was a similar shuffle in the junior men's rankings after Kevin Parker of Campbellville, Ont., fourth after figures, took over the lead after placing second in the short program.

BERTOLACCINI UPSETS LOPEZ

RANCHO MIRAGE (AP) — Silvia Bertolaccini sank a 15-foot birdie putt to beat Nancy Lopez 1-up on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff in the opening round of the $100,000 Triple Crown match play golf tournament Thursday.

The two played extremely well, although the Mission Hills Country Club course was soaked from snow the previous day and intermittent showers Thursday. Total strokes are incidental in match play, since scores are determined by holes won, but Bertolaccini finished 18 holes with a 68 and Lopez had a 69.

Bertolaccini, a 29-year-old native of Argentina who has won two Ladies Professional Golf Association tournaments in her four years on the tour, hit her approach on a second playoff hole 15 feet from the pin, then sank the putt for a four, as Lopez had to settle for a five. Both parred the first extra hole.

Defending champion JoAnne Carner was an impressive 5-and-4 winner over Debbie Massey in their opening match. Considered one of the LPGA's top match play golfers, Carner hit every green but one.

Other first-round winners were Amy Alcott, with a 2-and-1 victory over Mary Dwyer; Pat Bradley, who scored a 1-up victory over Jan Stephenson, and Sandra Post, former Oakville, Ont., resident who downed Kathy Postlewait, 5-and-4.

Bertolaccini said at one point she was ready to concede her match to Lopez, who dominated the LPGA tour in 1978 with nine victories and $189,813 in earnings.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East

2 NT	Pass	3 NT

Opening lead — seven of hearts.

Let's assume you're South and get to three notrump. West leads a heart, on which East plays the queen, and your first problem is whether to win the trick with the ace. You can tell from the lead and the bidding that East has the K-Q of hearts, and that you can therefore make two heart tricks whatever you do at trick one.

However, if you think it makes no difference what you do, you have another thing coming; if you make the wrong play you go down, while if you make the right play you make the contract.

You are much better off to duck the queen. To illustrate why, suppose you win the queen with the ace and either now or later play a spade or a club. West wins and returns a heart, permitting East to establish his suit while he still has the ace of clubs as an entry card. You eventually go down at least one.

But if you duck the queen of hearts you arrive home safe and sound. You discombobulate the East-West communication lines and are sure to make the contract, losing four tricks — one spade, one heart and two clubs.

Now let's take a look at the defensive side of the picture. East can knock you out of the box by playing the nine of hearts at trick one instead of the queen! This forces you to win with the jack and puts East one jump ahead of you in establishing his hearts before you can establish your clubs.

Actually, East should anticipate a duck of the queen if he plays it, since he can tell from his partner's seven of hearts lead that you have the A-J-8. He should therefore play the nine to compel you to win the first trick.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Added recognition is on agenda. You prove a point, finish an assignment and get finger on pulse of public. Aries, Libra figure prominently. Spotlight on business, advancement, civic duties honor and reputation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): New aproach brings desired results. Accent on publishing, journey, education, "spiritual revelation." Leo, Aquarius persons could play key roles. You get green light from afar — if lines of communication are clear.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Regain sense of direction. Budget deserves special attention. Accent on agreement involving past obligations, mortgage, interest rates. Teaching, philosophical concepts, morality are very much a part of scenario. You'll get answers!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Humor, balance, versatility can make this a banner day. Avoid attempting to force issues. Time is on your side. There might be a threat, but it will fall flat. Know it, cheery up, make inquiry concerning social organization.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Lady luck could be riding with you. The reasons are inexplicable. You pick the right people, you choose correct time and place. Number 4 figures prominently. Horizons expand. Your efforts are rewarded.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Be prepared for questions concerning personal affairs. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius figure prominently. Get ideas, concepts on paper. Format, script, book or article outline would result in ultimate gain.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Build on solid structure — take steps to insure security. Taurus figures prominently. Older family member provides information, asks questions. Eliminate electrical safety hazards at home. Please check!

PISCES (Feb. 19- March 20): Your natural talents come to surface — your "psychic" abilities are proven. Define terms, reject superficiality. You have grand opportunity to "set the record straight." Short trip brings desired results.

IF FEBRUARY 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are more conscious of body image than the average person. You have splendid sense of humor. You have great intellectual curiosity. You end to scatter your forces, to be superficial and to laugh when nervous — often at crucial times. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play key roles in your life. April could be your most significant month of 1979, a year featuring solid achievement. You may feel trapped, but actually you're on brink of "smething big." You are charming, extravagant and can be in love with more than one person simultaneously. You can make people happy — or make them nervous wrecks. You are controversial, but your smile, brightness win over even the most hardened skeptic.

FUN WITH FIGURES

Today we have a magic square. That's a sequence of consecutive positive numbers arranged in a solid square formation so that each column, each row, and each diagonal will add up to the same magic total.

That magic total is the square of the smallest number in the sequence, and the magic square is the smallest that will meet the requirements. So what is the sequence of numbers?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: NICER was 14876 (WINE 5417, prime).

LANG QUASHES DELAY CHARGE

Transport Minister Otto Lang Thursday revealed that the federal department of agriculture approved a request to run the Saanich Peninsula water line through its research station property west of Pay Bay Highway on Jan. 25.

The minister was replying to Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis who claimed Lang was delaying the completion of the Saanich Peninsula water project.

Curtis said unless Lang immediately acted to allow the line to go across the federal property, the water line might have to be rerouted at an additional cost of $70,000 to B.C. taxpayers.

But Lang in a telex to Curtis said department of agriculture officials informed him that approval was given Jan. 25 to the Capital Region District for the water main to be built across the research station property.

Executives Meet Feb. 26

Some of the biggest names in Canadian business will be in Victoria Feb. 26 for an executive meeting of Montreal Trust.

Heading the delegation will be Paul Britton Paine of Montreal, national chairman and president of the company.

Executive committee members attending will include Power Corporation of Canada President Peter Curry of Montreal, Standard Brands chairman Gaetan C. Morrissette of Montreal, former Simpson-Sears president Douglas J. Peacher of La Jolla, California, Investors Group president Robert H. Jones of Winnipeg, and MacKenzie McMurray, former chairman of Dominion Bridge of Montreal.

Also attending will be Robert Bonner, chairman of B.C. Hydro.

Local people at the meeting will be Hershell Smith, president of Sooke Forest Products, and Michael Field, Victoria branch manager for Montreal Trust.

This will be the first national executive meeting in Victoria for the company.

While here, the visitors will officiate at opening ceremonies for the company's new branch office at 747 Fort, which opened its doors in mid-December.

A reception at the Union Club will follow the executive meeting.

GOV'T LADLES $2.4M IN CULTURE GRANTS

A number of Victoria organizations are among groups awarded almost $2.4 million in cultural grants by the provincial government Thursday.

The grants come from the B.C. Cultural Fund which in turn is funded with interest from a $20 million endowment and lottery fund earnings.

Lotteries now provide 46 cents of each cultural fund dollar, Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said.

"These grants support the growth of the province's performing, visual and literary arts organizations," Curtis said. "As such they contribute to the growth of a rich cultural experience for people througout B.C."

Grants to local groups include Victoria Symphony, $110,000; Bastion Theatre, $89,500; Victoria Conservatory of Music, $60,000; Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, $89,500; Belfry, $20,000; Opera Association, $13,500; Kaleidoscope Theatre, $15,000; Victoria College of Art, $15,000; Circle Craft Society, $13,500 and various smaller grants.

2-Year Contract At Canadian Press

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiators for The Canadian Press and the Canadian Wire Service Guild reached an agreement Wednesday on a two-year contract.

The agreement calls for a three-step salary increase in the five-year, reporter-editor rate to $460.22 a week from the current $401.75. The increases are six per cent, retroactive to Jan. 1; one per cent effective July 1 and seven per cent effective Jan. 1, 1980.

The Canadian Wire Service Guild represents a majority of editorial and business office employees at The Canadian Press, Canada's national news gathering co-operative, and its affiliate Broadcast News Ltd., which serves private broadcasters and cable systems across Canada.

Noel Revives Royal Oak Industry Plan

Saanich Ald. Sandy Noel plans to ask council to reconsider the proposal for an industrial park at Royal Oak.

Noel said Thursday he will revive the issue — killed nearly a year ago — at Monday night's council meeting.

And this time he is optimistic that a majority of council members will be in favor.

Noel didn't identify the probable supporters and opponents and his comments appeared to mystify some observers.

Mayor Mel Couvelier and Aldermen John Mika, Howard Sturrock and Mary Casilio have all opposed the Royal Oak scheme previously, and new council member Ald. Irene Block is on record as an opponent.

Noel said council has stalled on the vital question of an industrial park for too many years.

"I feel it's time council took its head out of the sand and settled this matter," he added.

Noel's statgement followed the release Thursday of a report analyzing the ballots cast in last fall's referendum on the industrial park question.

The analysis was conducted by University of Victoria political scientists Dr. Daniel Koenig.

He noted in his report that of those favoring an industrial park, 68 per cent supported the Royal Oak site while 47 per cent came down in favor of the site proposed by the mayor at Interurban Road.

But Ben Pires, president of the Royal Oak Community Association, said today the report merely illustrates that statistics are subject to widely varying interpretations.

Some of Koenig's findings don't tally with the association's, he noted.

For example, according to the association's view, out of a total 9,013 votes cast 4,347 voted yes to the specific question whether Royal Oak was the desirable site for industry.

"We make that 48.2 per cent," said Pires.

He said Noel's stand was "sort of expected"

Pires said the association is trying to strike a positive note by pushing strongly for the location of the proposed horticultural school in the Royal Oak area.

Halston's Styles Echo Balenciaga

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times

The shadow of Balenciaga hovers over the Halston collection. Halston denies it, of course. "Maybe in the big dresses," he admits grudgingly, referring to, among other things, a perfectly proportioned halter-neck ombre style, pictured at left, its full skirt elevated in front and dipping to the floor at back.

It's not that Halston is making line-for-line Balenciaga copies, but he recaptures the spirit of elegance, and then appropriately relaxes it.

It was his New York made-to-order collection for spring that Halston unveiled the other day and he neatly avoided the pitfalls of the past which have snared other designers infatuated with the great days of fashion. The showing was almost over before he split a skirt. It was a floor-length affair in white taffeta, with a black taffeta jacket, and as the mannequin's legs appeared through the wrapped-front opening of the melon-shape skirt, the look was intriguing, not tacky.

Crisp silks like taffeta are, of course, a mark of the Balenciaga era, when clothes were structured and stiff enough to stand alone. Halston starts his collection with a clear red jacket and pants in this featherweight taffeta, almost like a silk poplin, which is cheery and bright. The pants are gathered at the waistline for ease and tapered to the ankles, and the outfit would work anywhere, anyplace.

There are a lot of pants in the collection, which Balenciaga would have kept for evening, because back in the 1950's, when he flourished, ladies didn't wear trousers during the day.

Halston recognizes that pants are necessities, not aberrations, and presents them in an offhand way. The neat, one-color look is a favorite of his, such as a simple beige gabardine coat thrown over matching trousers. The blouse is white for freshness — remember, this is a spring collection. Silk damask trousers take over for late day.

But the most spectacular designs are the beaded evening clothes — glittering and gleaming with a brilliance that hasn't been around for years. There aren't any prints in the collection, simply the beaded sparklers that weave fantasy patterns of green on black, gold on white, or even solid sheets of paillettes gilded with beaded embroidery, as in the picture at right.

It's Nautical But Nice

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — The navy moved into the Chanel collection this week to add a fresh touch to the classic outfits in the spring-summer Paris fashion shows.

The half-dozen nautical models in the Chanel show, well applauded by press and buyers, might have been inspired by the sailor motif in last October's Yves Saint Laurent ready-to-wear show.

But no matter — Saint Laurent has borrowed Chanel ideas, such as braided edges on cardigan-like suit jackets, in past years.

One of the best marine models was a long black evening skirt and low-waisted top embroidered all over with white and glitter beads with a black anchor and chain beaded around the waist.

More applause went to wide evening trousers in soft navy silk, buttoned in double rows in front in sailor style. The beaded sweater top sported an anchor embroidered in rhinestones and the white classic Chanel jacket was edged in navy blue.

Some typical Chanel slim afternoon dresses and one white coat had large square collars in back like a sailor's middy shirt.

Little gold anchors hung from some of the traditional Chanel chain belts and anchor pins decorated blouses. The show started with a red, white and blue checked raincoat with a middy collar and cuffs edged in navy. An anchor was embroidered on the white dress underneath.

The Chanel girls wore crocheted navy blue caps with fluffy ponpoms on top, a steal from the navy.

Otherwise, the traditional Chanel suits came in dreamy pale spring tweeds and window-pane plaids. This is one house that does not have to switch back to past decades and join the "retro" fever of this week's fashion shows.

Each season the Chanel house offers a number that looks like the best seller of the collection. This season's is model No. 32, a dress of navy blue mousseline faintly pin-striped in white with very wide white cuffs on the long sleeves and notched lapels aound the plunging V-neckline.

Envelope Stuffing Just a Con?

What's in Store
Joan Watson

One way to beat inflation is to make extra money. That's why advertisements saying you can make money by stuffing envelopes at home attract a good response, especially from women who can't juggle an outside job with family responsibilities.

Can you make any money this way? There could be a company that will pay $25 for stuffing 100 envelopes, but I haven't found one. Conduct your own search by replying to advertisements in the Business Opportunities column of a paper or magazine. Let me know if you are successful. In the meantime, here's what I've found.

When you answer one of these ads, chances are you will get a vague two-page letter extolling the benefits of the mail order business and suggesting that you address envelopes for such an operation. You do not get a list of companies begging for your services. What you do get very often is a pitch to send in money, usually about $10, for further details. It's explained that charging a fee keeps out curiosity seekers, those people who are always ordering anything that's free.

Let's say you send in $10 and wait for the secret of "making thousands in your own home."

The envelope comes. If you're lucky, you might get a list of companies panting for your typing and envelope-stuffing capabilities. But I'm betting you're going to get a confused jumble of ideas on how you can start your own mail order business by placing an advertisement in a publication which will be answered by more innocents like you. Now you're advertising for envelope stuffers, offering a kit on how to make money at home. Presumably you pull the same deal that's just been pulled on you.

Getting back to your $10 investment, you're given options for making money. It might involve placing a newspaper advertisement in the Business Opportunities column of a publication of your choice. This new wrinkle might ask the reader: "How would you like to get 100 letters a day each containing $1? Write to: (address) for details." You put your address in the ad. When the dollar bills start rolling in you might suggest to your customers that they sell household hints for a dollar a page.

Around now you might be wondering how legal this is. Regulations and enforcement are lax enough to permit it to go on. It isn't the responsibility of the publisher to investigate your business operations. It is the responsibility of the government. Some of the ambitious ad placers are not only skating close to the legal line but over-skating it, and they'll be hearing from the authorities. Take it as a warning if you're contemplating going into the game.

Back to this $10 mail order kit with all the ideas for making a dollar. It might suggest you make, package and sell, one of six great formulas. A sample: mix oil of citronella with Vaseline and put it on your collar as a mosquito remedy. (Then work up a formula for getting the mosquito remedy out of your shirt collar. The possibilities are endless.)

And they have another money-making scheme in return for your $10. They suggest you advertise a "remailing service." "Play jokes on your friends. Send sealed, stamped, addressed envelopes with 25 cents, and we will mail it for you from (name of your town)."

Do you ever get a list of companies willing to pay you $25 for stuffing 100 envelopes? You might get the address in Sweden of a firm, who, for $1 will tell you how you can "mail out 'sophisticated' photos and other adult supplies." You'll get addresses of companies that buy specialized mailing lists if you can find a way of identifying 100 pregnant women complete with addresses.

If there is a company in Canada willing to pay $25 for stuffing envelopes, we'll be pleased to tell our readers about it. That's postage prepaid, no other chores, no advertising done by the respondent. Just a straight job of stuffing or addressing envelopes. I'd like to know if such an opportunity exists; so would the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

AVIS AUX PARENTS FRANCOPHONES

Le Ministere de l'Education de la C-B a elabore un programme cadre elementaire (annees M a 7) dont la langue d'enseignement sera le francais.

Ce programme est destine en premier lieu aux enfants de parentage francophone. Il faudra que tout enfant inscrit a ce programme soit capable de suivre en francais tous les cours prescrits; aucune autre langue n'y sera employee (sauf l'anglais langue seconde). Le contenu du programme sera equivalent a celui du programme cadre donne en anglais.

Il se peut que, dependant du lieu ou se donnera le programme, certains eleves doivent changer d'ecole.

Si votre famille satisfait aux exigences et que le programme cadre vous interesse, veuillez remplir et envoyer avant le 26 janvier 1979 le bon ci-dessous. Ceci ne constitue qu'une expression d'interet, et non un engagement definitif.

ATTENTION FRANCOPHONE PARENTS

The B.C. Ministry of Education has developed an elementary (Grades K-7) core curriculum using French as the language of instruction.

This is a program primarily for children of Francophone parents. Children must be capable of being taught prescribed subjects in the French language. No other language will be used in this program (except for English as a second language subject).

The curriculum will parallel the English language core curriculum.

This will not be an immersion-type program for students wishing to learn French as a second language. However, space permitting, children of non-Francophone parents may be admitted if the children have sufficient understanding of French.

Depending on the location of the program, pupils may have to change schools.

In preparation for the program, the School Board needs to know how many pupils might enroll.

If you are interested and your family qualifies, please complete and mail the form below, before January 26, 1979. It is an expression of interest, not a commitment.

Volunteers Keep Art Gallery Wheels Turning

elizabeth forbes

The Art Gallery of Greater Victoria has an able and helpful corps of volunteers in its women's committee.

Within that corps is a smaller group whose ability and dedication are exceptional.

There you find those who have master-minded or helped direct major programs that bring in money for gallery work, including picture rentals, a gift shop and the gallery cafe.

These three projects are located in the wing that once was the home of Victoria's pioneer Spencer family.

Picture rentals, active for some 20 years, has space in what was the Spencer's laundry room.

It provides art lovers of all ages who are members of the gallery, an opportunity to have paintings on loan in their homes and, over a period of time, perhaps to find one they might like to own permanently.

Banks, provincial government offices, trust companies, law firms and business offices also use the picture loan service.

Three ships of the Royal Canadian Navy — Provider, Mackenzie and Gatineau — have loan selections aboard and these, on occasions, travel as far away as Japan.

Kathleen McGregor, presently in charge of the picture loan project explains that rental rates, based on the value of individual pictures, are nominal.

"We take twenty per cent as our commission and the artists get eighty per cent."

Artists include Stephanie Steele, Ardath Davis, Fleming Jorgensen, RCA., Tony Onlay, Harry Heine and Frank Boss.

You'll also find there the paintings of Sam Black who lives on Bowen Island; the late Pegi Nichol McLeod of Toronto; Peter Goertz who lives in Waterloo, Ont., and is well-known for his one-man shows and Andrew Zadorozny, who is connected with the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts.

Picture loan day is the second Monday of each month. The next is on February 12, at the gallery.

It Just Happened — The gallery cafe, in what was once the Spencer morning room, happened quite by accident.

A kitchen that went back to those long-ago days, was condemned.

The women's committee, believing such a unit was essential to the gallery program, decided to renovate and restore it.

Committee member Maria Manning, one time a catering sergeant in the Canadian Army, was given the responsibility of planning that renovation and seeing it carried out.

Once the work was completed, the kitchen looked entirely different.

"We were so proud of it we began thinking up ideas to keep it busy," Mrs. Manning says.

"That's when we looked at the room next to the kitchen area and visualized it as a small tea room open to the public."

After some discussion it was decided to give this ambitious idea a try and the tea room was opened last September.

There light refreshments are served at lunch and tea hours, Tuesday to Saturday each week and on Sunday afternoon, the same hours as the gallery.

Mrs. Manning has 22 volunteers working with her and they take turns in the kitchen and as waitresses, two in the mornings, two in the afternoons, each day.

"We're not quite sure yet whether this cafe idea will be a success," she says, "but we're working hard in the hope it will be popular and also profitable for the art gallery."

A Challenge — The idea of a gift shop in connection with the art gallery, was first discussed back in the early 1970s.

After tossing it around for a time the women's committee decided to ask its honorary members (those who had worked with the group for a specified number of years) if they would like to open and staff such a shop.

The challenge was accepted and Irene Conn, Linda Alexander and Mary McKean were named to head the venture.

They worked and planned. They spent long hours deciding what should be sold in a gift shop of this nature and once the decision was made, in selecting wares they thought would appeal to those who visited the art gallery.

Because of their flair for organization and good taste in selection, the gallery shop, now situated in what was the Spencer family's library, has a fascinating range of wares on its shelves and in its glass cases.

Mrs. Conn, a member of the women's committee since 1952, retired last year with her husband to another city. Mrs. McKean and Mrs. Alexander however, still head the gift shop committee.

They have a workroom with storage shelves in what was once a glassed-in sun porch and there they still plan business details and decide what to select and buy for the little shop.

"We have local wares on our shelves as well as the creations of artisans and craftsmen from other places in Canada and the more exotic corners of the world," Mrs. McKean says.

"These include glass, ceramics and precious metals."

She also speaks of snuff bottles, nesuke and ceramics specially selected to interest collectors.

Mrs. Alexander adds that the gift shop sells a lot of jewelry. Books and postcards of particular interest to gallery visitors are displayed and the shop does have a fine selection of prints.

Prices range from $1 up.

There's a well-trained corps of volunteers that take turns to staff the shop which is open Mondays to Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and on Sunday afternoon from 2 to 5 p.m.

Common ¢ents

By KATE MacQUEEN

Lipstick stains are a common problem when you hurriedly pull on a pullover top. If the red smear shows, a quick daubing with cold water can only set the stain. Wait until you have time to rub a bit of full-strength liquid detergent or oil (baby or vegetable). Then wash as usual.

Store fresh cherries unwashed and with stems left on and they will keep better longer. Stems help to hold in juice and flavor.

Mothers planning to make school skirts for young daughters can cut out skirts several inches longer than the pattern. Then, cut off the extra length and save it until the skirts are too short. Stitch on the cut-off fabric and hide the seam with bias tape or rick rack. (Wash the extra fabric a few times, if the skirt fabric tends to lose color.)

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

Dear Dr. Powell:

I am an 11-year-old girl. My mother gave me a book about human reproduction. She told me to ask her questions but I just can't. I don't even want her to know I'm writing this. She would just laugh. My problem is I just can't talk freely about sex. That book my mom gave me just doesn't answer my questions. But I'm not going to ask my mom, that's for sure. What can I do?

ANSWER: If your mother gave you the book, she wants you to know but has difficulty talking about sex. Many parents find it very difficult to discuss sex with their children and are particularly concerned about the questions they may be asked.

To help you understand about your body and the changes which occur at puberty, there are courses in many schools designed to answer your questions. To solve your immediate problem about where to find the answers you could ask your teachers or the school nurse or your own family doctor. All of these people are concerned about the questions you ask.

"What can I do?" you ask. I think your mother really wants to help you, so find an easy question for you to ask and begin with that. Gradually you can get an answer to more sensitive questions that you really want the answers to. Make the effort to talk to your mother. I am sure she will not laugh.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I have a friend who is 20 years. He and I get along great. The problem is that I am only 14. My father always teases me that I am going to see my boyfriend (which is not true) when I am really going to see his sister.

Well, last week my father got very mad because I was watching TV alone with him in his house, and believe me that is all that we were doing. My dad was furious and banned me from going into their house until "further notified." I don't see my father's reasons for doing what he did.

ANSWER: I think your father is right to be concerned about you spending time alone with your 20-year-old friend. I am sure that your father has a lot of confidence in you but he may not have as much in your friend.

You know that nothing was going to happen, but other people might think differently. I am sure your father was both concerned with your well-being and also about what people would think about you.

It may be difficult for you to completely understand but I would advise you to have some respect for your father's concern. Though he may have over-reacted in your eyes, he did so out of caring for you.

I.D. Card Cuts Hotel Rates

Youth on the Move

By LUCY IZON

In major cities of the United States hotel rates can be well above a student's budget but if you have an International Student Identity Card, here are some hotels in major cities that will honor it for reduced rates.

In San Francisco you can use your student status for reductions at the Regent Hotel, 562 Sutter St., San Francisco, Ca. 94102, tel. (415) 421-5818. It's open year round and accepts reservations. You'll find it in the heart of the city right off Union Square.

In Los Angeles you can try the Alexandria Hotel, Spring at Fifth St., Los Angeles, CA 90012, tel. (213) 626-7484. They're open year round and accept reservations. In the hotel you'll find a tour desk which offers student discounts on all sightseeing. To reach it from the airport you take a bus to the Greyhound station. From the bus station you walk one block north on Los Angeles St. to 5th St. Turn left and go two blocks to Spring St.

In New York city, student reductions are available at Hotel Empire, Broadway at 63rd St., New York, N.Y. 10023, tel. (212) 695-0291. This is the home of the New York Students Centre. Also open year round, you'll find it in the heart of Manhattan opposite Lincoln Centre, accessible by subway and bus. In the hotel you'll be able to get information on inexpensive U.S. travel and on student travel facilities in Europe.

Students and other young people who want to travel within the U.S. by air cannot get special youth fares, which are not available there. There are, however, numerous types of fares available that are geared towards the budget traveller.

One of the most intriguing types of fares are the unlimited mileage tickets. If you have several weeks of holidays, it's possible to cover an amazing number of destinations.

Eastern Airlines has one of the most expensive yet one of the most appealing if you want to feel like a jet setter for three weeks. At present the pass, which costs between $372 (U.S.) and $399 depending on varying departure taxes, allows you to fly for a minimum of 7 days and a maximum of 21 days, not including your day of departure, to any of Eastern's 101 cities in the U.S.

Before you get too excited, the line doesn't fly to Hawaii, although it does go to the Caribbean, Mexico and the Bahamas.

To use the pass you must leave from a U.S. city that Eastern services and you must travel with a friend (one adult can go with two children). Also you must make at least three stops and your U.S. starting point and final destination must be the same city. Tickets must be purchased 14 days in advance and you can't depart during a peak vacation period.

To help plan your route Eastern Airlines offices have a brochure available that includes a route map of the cities it serves.

Allegheny Airlines also makes available an unlimited mileage pass known as a Liberty fare. Allegheny's network of cities is smaller and the price of the pass drops accordingly, to $179 for 10 days of use.

With this one you are going to have to plan more carefully since you're a little more restricted. The pass allows you to fly anytime Saturdays or Sundays but during the week you can only use it up until noon. Again, you must start and finish in the U.S.

Now that Allegheny flies into Florida and Texas this pass can save you a lot of money if you're travelling along their routes in the Eastern United States and you can use it at any time of the year. Unlike Eastern's pass, this one has no blackout period. You must purchase your pass at least seven days prior to travel and you can get confirmed reservations.

Although many Canadians don't really consider themselves foreigners when travelling south of the border there are ways to turn your foreign status to your financial advantage.

If you're a student or a temporary visitor in a Canadian border city, but your home residence is more than 100 miles from the U.S. border, it's possible to take advantage of a 40-per-cent reduction of regular economy air fares into and around the U.S.

These special fares were created as an incentive for foreign travellers from abroad but there is no reason Canadians can't take advantage of them too. You'll have to prove, with official documents such as a driver's licence that your permanent residence is beyond this 100-mile buffer zone — and that's as the crow flies.

There is one restriction to keep in mind: The first leg of your journey must be booked 30 days in advance — your return can be left open. United Airlines has started this program and other major U.S. airlines are expected to have similar arrangements. You should contact your travel agent for more details.

Marriage on Skids?

SAND SPRINGS, Okla. (AP) — Sherry Morris figures she'll be able to laugh — some day — about a storm that almost put a halt to her wedding plans.

The steep hill where the parents of the former Sherry Bradfield live here was made impassible Friday by a coating of ice.

Even the most determined drivers couldn't negotiate the hill,

Friday night's planned wedding was also lacking a groom. He was stranded in nearby Tulsa.

But true love finds a way. The bride, clutching gown and bouquet, boarded a cardboard box Friday afternoon to slide down the hill.

Miss Bradfield then slid down the hill to her grandmother's house, using sneakered feet for brakes.

From there, she was driven to a chapel at the University of Tulsa for the wedding. Her future husband made it to the wedding in a truck provided by a relative.

"When the hill began to freeze over I went into hysterics," the new Mrs. Morris said. "It's not funny now, but maybe in 20 years it will be."

Patient to Doctor Communication Vital

I have been taking Tagamet on and off for about five months. Am I overdoing it? Is there a limit to how long I should be taking this new drug? — Mr. B.G.

Dear Mr. G.: For my readers' information, Tagamet is an excellent new drug which has virtually revolutionized the treatment and control of stomach and duodenal ulcers. In a complicated way, the drug blocks the production of hydrochloric acid which is one of the chief factors in the cause and the persistence of stomach ulcers.

Your letter intrigues me particularly as it is such gross evidence of the deficiences of communication between patients and their doctors. Your doctor wisely prescribed this drug. Certainly, he would not expect you take it "on and off for five months" without again evaluating its advantages in your particular case.

It makes me wonder whether a doctor did indeed, prescribe the drug or whether you are taking it on the advice of a solicitous friend. No drug is ever prescribed by a doctor for an indefinite period, without supervision.

About six months ago, I discovered a completely bare spot on my head. It is not a case of receding hairline, but a round spot about an inch above and behind my ear. It is not scabby or crusty, like psoriasis, but simply bare and smooth. Does this indicate a lack of circulation? Can I do anything to stimulate new growth of hair? — MRS. E.K.

Dear Mrs. K:

The partial, or complete, loss of hair is known as "alopecia." A particular type of localized loss of hair is known as "alopecia areata." This describes the sudden loss of hair, in a small localized area, in people who have no apparent skin disorder.

Almost invariably, with time and patience, the regrowth of hair begins and continues until the entire spot returns to normal. The topical application of medicines usually is not effective. For a while, cortisone was tried in these cases, in an effort to produce a more rapid regrowth of hair. In fact, the absorption of the cortisone from the scalp area may even be dangerous.

A patient of mine who had recurring episodes of "alopecia areata" once told me that he was most successful in stimulating hair growth by applying diluted iodine around the edges of the bald surface. It's worth a try. Be sure that it is diluted because concentrated iodine can burn the tender skin surface.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH . . . Care must be taken when young children have their temperatures taken rectally. A sudden shift of the child can break the thermometer.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am 82 and in good health. My wife died three years ago and I live alone in an apartment.

Two years ago a nice-looking 65-year-old widow moved into the apartment across the hall and we became friendly. We started eating together — usually at my place. She would prepare everything at her place and bring it over.

After supper we watched TV, held hands, and exchanged a few kisses. Well, before I knew it, things got out of hand and she was spending the night with me. In my bed!

I finally put a stop to it when she began to tell me she was "in love" with me. At no time did I tell her I was in love with her because I'm not.

Now she comes over every night without being invited, and she's pressuring me to marry her.

I have no intentions of marrying this lady or any other. How do I disassociate myself from her without hurting her feelings? — WANTS OUT.

DEAR WANTS: Be honest. Tell the lady you have no plans to marry her and she will probably disassociate herself from YOU. If she doesn't, you could cool the relationship by seeing another lady or two . . . or three.

DEAR ABBY: Sex is an animal instinct which is normal in animals. Man is an animal, right? So when man feels the natural urge to have sex, what is wrong with following his natural instincts? — MAX.

DEAR MAX: Animals have a natural urge to procreate. The lowest animals mate by instinct. Man, the highest of all animals, mates not only to procreate, but to express the ultimate in love.

Animals have no capacity for love. One mate is as good as the next. Casual and promiscuous mating among civilized people (or simply using another to satisfy one's own selfish sex urge) is not only immoral, it's meaningless.

$2M in Illegal Drug Sales Made by Stoolie - Lawyer

VANCOUVER (CP) — An informant paid by the RCMP to gather evidence against three suspected drug traffickers made more than $2 million by selling drugs while working for the police, a Vancouver lawyer said Thursday.

Sidney Simons, whose bid to speak on police information-gathering techniques was rejected by the McDonald commission, told reporters the informant made some of that money by selling most of a pound of the restricted drug MDA bought for $8,500 with police funds and approval.

Simons said the man testified last November in Nanaimo, B.C., at the trial of Raymond Ridge, 31, of Ladysmith, B.C., who was convicted of conspiring to traffic in MDA and sentenced to three years in prison.

Simons said the case is only one of many that show the immorality and illegality of police techniques. His bid to speak to the commission, headed by Mr. Justice David McDonald, was denied because he had not submitted a brief a month before the hearing as required.

Simons said the informant, while gathering evidence, committed "about 40 offences to which police personnel are party, directly by participating or by aiding, abetting, encouraging."

Simons said the testimony given at the trial showed that while working for the RCMP between May, 1976, and August, 1977, the informant imported two tons of marijuana and several pounds of cocaine, trafficked in speed and imported two handguns for his personal use.

His first half-pound purchase of MDA was kept by police as an exhibit, said Simons, but a later one-pound purchase, paid for by the RCMP, was given back, after samples were taken, to the informant who sold it.

Testimony at the trial, Simons said, showed that the informant then used the proceeds from the sales to buy two more pounds of MDA, both of which he sold after police had taken samples. He was also known to be operating a plane with only a student's licence and was involved in a crash, said Simons.

The informant's contact during the operation was RCMP Cpl. Chester Cary of the Victoria drug unit, who testified at the Nanaimo trial that he was aware of the man's activity.

S.Sgt. Bob Hawkes of the Victoria drug unit said the RCMP has helped relocate the man as they do all informants whose lives might be in danger after testimony. That help included a $600-a-month living allowance that was paid from September, 1977, just after the arrests were made, at least until the trial, he said.

RCMP Supt. Scotty Gardiner, in charge of criminal investigations in Victoria, refused to comment on the case, saying that it is before the courts.

Simons, however, said the case will not be heard in appeal court until this spring. The appeal will be based on the argument that the County Court judge's instructions to the jury were incomplete.

Ridge was charged along with Arthur Williams of Ladysmith, who died in a plane crash before the trial. A third man wanted in connection with the case has not been found, police said.

NOOSE KEPT IN JAMAICA

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — The Jamaican House of Representatives voted 24-to-19 Thursday to retain the death penalty. Officials said there are currently 79 persons in Jamaica facing the death penalty, but that all of them would have their cases reviewed as a result of the vote. The last hanging in the Caribbean island country was in April, 1976.

ONE OF MY FAVORITE HOMES

IS IT YOURS? Old time Victorians have loved this home since it brought genuine New England charm to its corner of Rockland in 1923. Let me take you through its inviting front door into the gracious Georgian interior with its spacious halls, reception rooms and sunporch. Let's admire the intricate mouldings and fine fireplaces — a far cry from today's colonial imitations. Then let's climb the beautiful stairway to the five bedrooms so well endowed with convenient storage and bathrooms. Down the back stairs to a kitchen remodelled to modern standards without losing colonial flavour. Oh and there are bonuses too, an attic and basement levels. SO MUCH LIVING FOR YOUR FAMILY. Come with me to see it by appointment $235,000. ML

CLASSIFIED ACTION
AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for-rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Jewelry Lifted

HOUSTON (AP) — Clerks paid no particular attention to one female shopper at the Neiman Marcus speciality store.

She apparently found what she wanted — $150,000 in jewelry — without a clerk's helping hand. Police said the woman evidently pried up prongs holding a protective glass case, then lifted the top to get the jewelry. Authorities said 24 rings are missing.

Planning Act Studied for B.C.

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Thursday that British Columbia is the only province without a municipal planning act and he is looking at general ideas for establishing one.

Vander Zalm said the specifics of such an act have not been worked out but there is a need to establish basic principles of good planning in B.C.

He said he is sure the proposed act would not interfere with existing planning policies within some municipal boundaries and it would benefit areas with little or no planning.

Stations Rejected

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission Thursday rejected the bid of Twin Cities Radio Limited of British Columbia for frequency modulation (FM) rebroadcast radio stations at Vernon, Quesnel and Salmon Arm.

The commission sided with intervenors who said approval of the applications in the three B.C. interior communities could wipe out chances of setting up a full local service.

The company had planned to relay programming from CFFM-FM Kamloops. It would have been the first commercial FM radio service for the three communities.

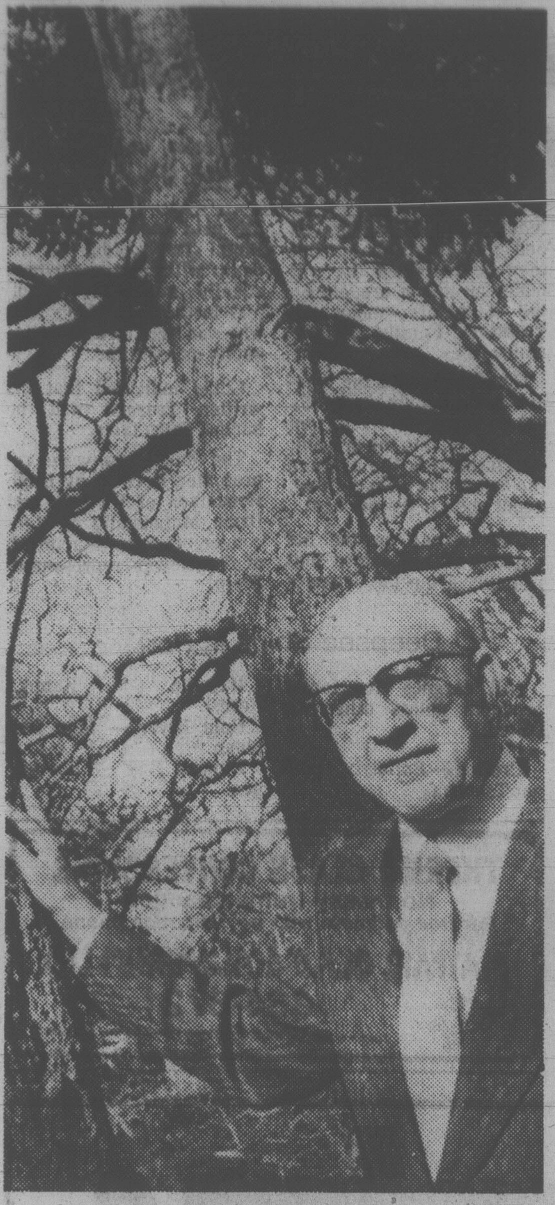
They Are Cloning for Super Trees



Dr. Orr-Ewing

By AB KENT
Times Staff

When all of B.C.'s best trees have been put through the mill, the genetic engineers will be standing by to send in the clones — tomorrow's super trees.

Reforestation has been going on for almost 50 years, but on a random basis producing good trees and bad indiscriminately for the same planting cost.

Victoria researcher Dr. Alan Orr-Ewing says foresters might as well plant the best if it's going to cost the same anyway.

Besides, reforestation becomes increasingly important as natural forests are depleted by intensive logging.

Concern and research into future wood supply brings no early tangibles, easily involving generations of scientists devoted to improving tree species that may be half a century growing to maturity. Many researchers will be long gone before the final proof is logged.

Orr-Ewing, who may be regarded part of the first generation, retired last month from the research division of B.C. Forest Service where for most of his 30 years' service he pioneered and worked on tree cloning, or selective breeding.

Without the hocus-pocus of intensive laboratory experiments associated with the cloning of animal and human cells, the tree geneticist is proving that superior trees can be bred by cross-pollinating seed taken from the best examples of standing timber.

These, in turn, produce superior seed or may be used for grafting to already established root stock. Nature does the rest.

Orr-Ewing's work for the forest service is being continued by his colleagues J.C. Heaman, whose specialty, like Orr-Ewing, is Douglas fir; and G.K. Kiss, who is devoting the same kind of research to spruce.

It may be 40 to 60 years before any of these genetically superior species are harvested (the earliest in B.C. were firs planted in 1954 near Lake Cowichan). But the evidence points toward them being straighter, taller, tougher and maturing sooner with a greater volume of wood than even the best of the naturally-propogated forest.

Foresters call them "plus trees." Propagated trees live in families, and the offspring are monitored, measured, pruned and photographed in every stage of development.

Each is given an identity, a number distinguishing each specimen by date and location, sex and age.

There are 28 plantations involving most logging areas of Vancouver Island and parts of the mainland.

Orr-Ewing knows many individual trees by number, having been intimate with them since selecting the original parents.

Crossing two specimens for the first time is a little like playing Russian roulette, and like marriage, is not always successful.

"You don't know what you're going to get when you cross. You hope it will be the best trees you can get," the forest researcher said. But it could produce dwarfs, stunted, misshapen trees esthetically pleasing perhaps, but unsuitable for lumber.

A grafted plus tree may not necessarily yield plus seed cones.

In the expectation there will be failures, foresters apply the same testing and standards to progeny, and it makes "an enormous difference if they are well-planted and followed through," Orr-Ewing said.

"The whole point is to get better trees on the ground when planting during reforestation. It costs just as much to plant poor stock as the best, and it might as well be the best," he said.

Any additional cost in preparing higher quality seed compared with harvesting of wild seed is bound to be made up for by the earlier maturity and higher standard of timber.

"Good seed does not cost, it pays," Orr-Ewing quoted from the motto of a Swedish tree improvement area.

Yet, as he points out, trees are perhaps the last agricultural crop to receive the attention of geneticists who through the centuries have improved by selection and breeding the wild fruits and grains of the earth.

Because the process takes so long it is hard to maintain continuity in research programs.

"We can only hope the work will carry on," he said. "Unlike agriculture where each year is a crop year, you can see the results. It's different with tree research."

One of the objectives of crossing specimens — perhaps two species of the same genus — is to develop in one tree the better characteristics of both. This may require the use of pollen or seeds from widely separated points.

Orr-Ewing said in his work with Douglas firs, confined mainly to the coastal region, he has used trees from Oregon to produce plus trees in the San Juan River Valley.

There is a sound genetic basis for this because one of the weaknesses of reproduction is the risk of in-breeding, just as in animals and humans. The scientist said ideally the best performers from a variety of environments should be crossed, since each area produces charactertistics of its own soil and climate.

Douglas fir ranges all along the coast from California to Alaska and inland to the Rockies in Canada, and inland to greater or lesser degrees in northwestern states from Utah through New Mexico and Texas. There are small isolated pockets as far south as Mexico.

Part of the program in B.C. is to determine whether trees from other parts of the continental range of Douglas fir will grow better in this province, a study being conducted by forester Keith Illingworth, also of Victoria.

Much test planting is done on logged-over Crown land, but some belongs to the major forest operators like B.C. Forest Products, MacMillan Bloedel, and Crown Zellerbach Canada, who also maintain some experimental plots for independent research.

Orr-Ewing said there is excellent co-operation between government and private researchers on both sides of the Canada-U.S. border, as with foresters in such other lands as Scotland, France, Germany and Scandinavia.

They provide each other with seeds and pollen and share their research findings.

But Orr-Ewing thinks his European colleagues have an easier time in one respect.

France, for example, has beautiful forests, he said, including oaks planted before the Revolution.

"I think Europeans respect the forester more than people here. They have a great respect for trees. Here, they associate you with wardens, something to do with firefighting or insects.

"The importance of the plantations is not generally appreciated," he said, citing the vandalism foresters have to contend with.

"I have to conclude in B.C. people have very little forest sense."

Hunters see specially-made metal signs reading: "B.C. Forest Service Research Plot. No cutting or disturbance," but they riddle the signs with bullets, shoot the tops off trees or pull down signs and trees. Others harvest the plots for Christmas trees, and in one instance shake splitters ran a bulldozer through the middle of a plot to skid out old cedar logs.

"I've actually been shot at at least three times," Orr-Ewing said.

GARDENING
hilda beastall

Commonly grown annual flower seeds that home gardeners want to start indoors this month include snapdragon, lobelia, petunia, scabiosa, verbena, sweet pea, sweet alyssum, pansy and delphinium.

Of these, the ones which will need almost the 12-week period with frost-free temperature are lobelia, petunia and verbena. The remainder should spend April in a coldframe to harden off gradually, but with the glass cover off at every mild opportunity and in showers.

The size of seeds is an indication as to depth of sowing. The smaller the less covering; the larger ones get a covering of the same depth as their diameter. This is a guideline.

Snaps are considered about medium in size, while petunia are very fine and sweet peas are on the very large size.

Seeds of snaps should be covered with a light sprinkling of sandy compost; petunias and other fine ones are better if sown as thinly as possible on top of fine soil in very shallow drills and then gently pressed with the narrow edge of a small piece of wood or the length of a pencil. This makes contact between soil (which must be damp) and the seed which needs moisture to enable it to germinate.

Petunia seeds germinate indoors in a period between 7 to 10 days at a temperature between 18 and 24 deg.C. The higher temperature is maximum for day, the lower is preferable for hours of darkness. Snapdragons germinate within sevendays at the same temperatures.

Lobelia (annual kinds) may take from two to three weels before showing, but comes faster in ideal conditions of bottom heat and uniformly damp soil mixture. Annual scabiosa is the same.

Verbena, an annual which makes a grand show in a warm garden and is seldom seen locally, germinates in 21 days and then needs warm sun for growing into small plants for May setting out. Verbena seed loses much of its viability (germination power) after one year from harvesting.

When we come to delphinium seed, a lower bottom heat is needed, 16 to 21 deg.C being ample for starting then cooler temperatures for growing into plants. These are almost winter hardy plants in local gardens that seldom get frost remaining in the soil. This seed too is good for only one year.

Pansy seed is another short-lived seed, though sometimes if kept under ideal storage conditions it germinates at two years from gathering. Germination indoors occurs at 16 to 21 deg.C in seven to 14 days. Then as with delphiniums, cooler growing indoors with good overhead light is needed.

Sweet pea seed sown early this month indoors will give plants to grow outdoors with enough good flowers for June flower shows. Thereafter the plants are constantly in bloom until into September if every stem is cut off before the seed pods swell. With a light wooden framework which can be taken down for winter storage, and an east-facing wall or fence, these fragrant flowers are not difficult to grow. They just need a little daily care once flowering commences.

Seeds of sweet pea germinate in 10 to 14 days, according to color. Don't have the soil mixture too damp after the first three or four days, for some colors rot more easily than others. Again, cooler conditions after germination, and good overhead daylight.

As with all germination of seeds indoors (or out for that matter) check each day for signs of sprouting in the seed rows, and to be sure there is dampness below the surface where the roots are to penetrate. The soil must never be wet or the necessary air will be absent. The surface is better kept almost dry to avoid dampening-off which causes seedlings to topple over from weakness of stem.

When germination is complete, a light dusting of fine dry, clean sand on the surface around and between the tiny seedlings helps to maintain dampness in the soil below and prevents damp air from rising around the seedlings at night.

4 ACTORS PARDONED

BARCELONA (Reuter) — Four actors jailed for insulting the Spanish armed force have been pardoned, their lawyer said. The three men and a woman, members of the Els Joglars (The Players) mime troupe, were sentenced last March to two years in jail by a military tribunal because they participated in a play depicting a sham court martial with drunken army officiers.

Captain Miriam Merritt shows sketch of proposed new Salvation Army complex.

Sally Ann Drive Launched

A campaign to raise $500,000 to complete a fund for a new Salvation Army building was launched Thursday.

Victoria Ald. Murray Glazier, chairman of the building fund appeal, said the Salvation Army has committed $1.5 million towards the project, the B.C. Government $1 million with the remainder to be raised in the next two months from individuals and businesses.

"I'm confident the community will respond to this appeal," Glazier said.

The new building complex will provide additional facilities for the Men's Social Services Centre and the Harbour Light Centre in downtown Victoria.

The present facilities, located in old buildings on Yates and Johnson, near Wharf Street, are inadequate to care for transients in need of food and accommodation and for the treatment of alcoholics.

Glazier said often men are turned away because of lack of space.

"But the greatest need is for alcoholic treatment facilities, including detoxification rooms which are not available in the present building," he said.

Members of the campaign committee are: J.A. Baines, Vancouver Island corporations, C.R. Harvey, B.C. corporations, H.J. Kennedy, national corporations, R.J. Bower, special names and foundations, Capt. W. Merritt, campaign secretary, D. Kenneth Travers, campaign treasurer and J. Stuart Keate, in charge of the campaign in Vancouver.

Binding Terms Not Met: HEU

Employers aren't living up to terms established last month in a binding arbitration brought down under the Essential Services Disputes Act, according to a spokesman for the 22,000-member Hospital Employees' Union.

HEU secretary-business manager Jack Gerow said he has gone before the Labor Relations Board in an attempt to prove that seven Vancouver area hospitals are failing to live up to the award brought down Jan. 18.

The HEU was the first union to voluntarily use the binding arbitration machinery of the provincial government's Essential Services Disputes Act.

Gerow was bitter about his experience with the system.

"Even though employers are failing to abide by terms of such awards, the main criticism must be reserved for the Social Credit government for inflicting on public sector workers legislation designed to benefit public sector employers — namely the government. It is leading us to a state of industrial relations dictatorship," he said.

Gerow said the legislation is structured in such a way that employers can take their time in abiding by awards.

In the hospitals dispute, he said, the government took advantage of delays by setting five per cent increase guidelines on public sector spending.

The employers are now using that ceiling as an excuse to get around contract obligations, said Gerow.

Victoria Donation Not Dead

The city of Victoria may yet make a financial contribution towards the purchase of Sidney Island.

At a meeting Thursday the finance committee rejected a request from Sidney Mayor Dick Leigh that Victoria donate to the campaign to buy the island for park purposes.

Ald. Robin Blencoe, who voted against making a donation, said a few hours later he'd reconsidered.

"The Sidney Island issue went right by me. I just suddenly realized that we didn't give that situation enough attention," said Blencoe.

He will talk to Mayor Mike Young and request the item be brought up before council at its next Thursday meeting.

Ald. Larry Ryan and Bill Tindall were the other committee members present, and they voted against the request for funds.

Sidney and North Saanich have donated $500 each to the Sidney Island Committee, a group set up to persuade the provincial government to buy the island before it's sold for development.

Alderman Loser In Will Hearing

North Saanich alderman Owen Philp was deprived in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday of the major share of a 1974 will said to be worth a net $138,000.

Mr. Justice J.G. Gould made his ruling following an eight-day hearing into the will of Irene Frances McRae who died Nov. 10, 1977.

In her last will, she left $10,000 legacies to each of her daughters, Doreen Beverley Williamson of West Vancouver and Sally Laidlaw of Vancouver.

The residue of the estate went to the 48-year-old alderman, subject to a life interest to his 82-year-old father Barney Somerville Philp, with whom McRae lived between 1970 and 1973 after they had first met at a party in 1967.

But in prior wills, the two daughters were to be the beneficiaries of the entire McRae estate.

Two actions were filed in Supreme Court. Gould ruled that the will had been proved and granted probate. But then he redivided the will under an action brought by the daughters under the Testators Family Maintenance Act.

Gould increased the legacies to the daughters to $35,000 each plus interest from Nov. 10, 1977, to the present. The interest is the average the estate has been earning, about eight to 8½ per cent.

The income on the net amount of the estate that remains after the legacies are paid goes to the elder Philp. The residue on his death will then be divided equally among the daughters instead of Philp's son, who was sustained in his capacity as executor.

Gould indicated that his written reasons will be handed down later.

The daughters were represented in court by Hugh Henderson of Victoria and Brian McLoughlin of Vancouver. George Macintosh of Vancouver represented Philp.

DROUGHT BRINGS POWER CRISIS

Blackouts for Wash.?

Washington State is facing a severe electricity shortage this year and there appears to be little B.C, can do to help as it has in the past.

In Olympia, acting Energy Office chief Fred Adair warned of the seriousness of the drought-created situation.

His state agency is preparing a five-stage plan, ranging from voluntary curtailment to mandatory "rolling blackouts," for coping with any power shortages that may develop.

B.C. Hydro information officer David Robertson said today: "We are making another provincial survey right now and we may have to reduce or stop our export of power to Washington".

"We only export power after we have met the needs of all of our B.C. customers."

Echoing comments by Gov. Dixy Lee Ray earlier this week, energy chief Adair Thursday urged homeowners, businesses and industries in the state to begin reducing their use of electricity.

He said "weather and hydroelectric system conditions currently are such that a major shortfall in reservoir refill in the summer of 1979 is a real possibility.".

Adair said precipitation has been far below normal since last September, and cold weather has sapped energy supplies for months.

ICBC COLLECTS OLD DEBTS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corporation of British Columbia said Thursday it has begun collecting about $19 million in debts owed the company since it was established five years ago.

ICBC spokesman Bev Penhall said a list has been compiled of the names of 106,000 people owing money to the corporation and sent to the 800 ICBC insurance agents and motor vehicle branches throughout the province.

When people come in to renew their insurance, agents check for a special code number on the renewal form which indicates they owe money to the corporation.

Penhall said about half of the money owing is the result of people not paying traffic violation penalty point assessments while others used bad cheques to pay premiums.

Penhall said about 20,000 people have cleared up their debts since the program began Jan. 2. Most of the balance is expected to be paid by the Feb. 28 insurance renewal deadline.

Schreyer congratulates Carnival Queen Christine Cantin

Schreyer Gets Boos

QUEBEC (CP) — Festivities to mark the opening of the 25th Quebec winter carnival were marred Thursday night when Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer was booed because he spoke English.

On his first official visit outside Ottawa since he was installed as governor-general on Jan. 22, Schreyer was in Quebec City specifically to open the carnival.

Addressing a crowd estimated by police at between 4,000 and 5,000, he opened in French referring to the "great success" of the carnival and complimented the seven young women named carnival "duchesses" for their "grace and charm."

Then he switched to Canada's other official language to welcome "all my fellow Canadians and Americans attending carnival events."

The reaction from the mostly French-speaking audience came in the form of booing and shouts of "Go home." Not everyone in attendance jeered the governor-general, but a substantial portion did.

Gov.-Gen. Schreyer was unfazed by the incident and his wife Lily stood by his side smiling throughout the booing, which ended when he stopped speaking.

Two years ago a predominently English-speaking audience in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens booed the French verses of O Canada when the anthem was sung at the beginning of a hockey game.

Last fall Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan was booed when he began a speech to an Edmonton audience in French. But Thursday night was the first time anybody here could remember a similar reaction to words spoken in English.

Ironically, the governor-general had spoken hopefully of the prospects for national unity when he was sworn in less then two weeks ago. And Jacques Paradis, president of the Quebec carnival organizing committee, added yet another ironic note when he told reporters that Gov.-Gen. Schreyer had been invited to open the festivities only after the committee had tried vainly to get Premier Rene Levesque to preside.

Earlier in the day, the governor-general, flanked by members of the local RCMP narcotics squad pressed into duty as an impromptu escort, paid a courtesy call on Levesque.

The two exchanged friendly banter, switching freely between English and French and reminiscing about the days when both were premiers, before Schreyer's NDP government was beaten by the Conservatives in Manitoba.

Marchand Joins Frog Song Critics

OTTAWA (CP) — B.C. municipal affairs minister Bill Vander Zalm's song about frogs will have more repercussions in Quebec than all the constitutional amendments proposed to date, says Senator Jean Marchand.

"Do you believe that when a B.C. minister . . . at the height of the crisis, decides to compose a song about frogs, that does not have repercussions in Quebec?" the former Liberal cabinet minister said in the Senate Thursday night.

"I tell you that it has more repercussions than all the constitutional amendments proposed to date."

Premier Bennett had earlier said he wasn't concerned about the effect on his appearance at an upcoming provincial-federal first minister's meeting.

Sen. Claude Wagner, in Edmonton Thursday to address a convention of teachers on education and national unity, said, "There are some bigots who think they're funny when they're not funny at all."

Senator Marchand said the national unity crisis cannot be solved by constitutional changes as long as ethnic prejudices remain.

He referred to such things as Alberta bumper stickers saying eastern Canadians should be allowed to freeze in the dark, the booing of the French version of O Canada in Toronto and the bilingualism-in-the-air crisis of 1976.

Senator Marchand gave his impassioned address only a few hours after persons in Quebec City booed Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer for adding some English words to a French speech opening the city's annual winter carnival.

Despite a slight recovery on currency markets this morning, Canadian banks expect the dollar to fall further in the next few weeks under pressure of seasonal factors such as the winter shipping slowdown and tourist spending abroad.

A downturn in U.S. economic indicators is also threatening to push the dollar below the 83 cents mark in of terms of its U.S. counterpart.

The dollar's recovery followed release of government foreign currency reserve figures.It had closed at a 46-year low of 83.35 cents Thursday.

Finance Minister Jean Chretien and Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, announced Thursday that they will appear before a parliamentary committee next week to defend government policy on the dollar.

Currency traders have complained that the government and opposition have done little to bolster confidence in the dollar in recent weeks. One analyst pointed to "petty bickering in the House of Commons" and "veiled warnings of foreign currency exchange controls."

Traders on the interbank wholesale market generally approved of the January reserve figures which showed the Bank of Canada had spent $323 million to maintain the "orderly float" of the currency. "It was much less than we expected," one Toronto banker said.

The government also announced that $4.4 billion U.S. had been spent last year, despite a drop of eight cents in the dollar's value.

Meanwhile, Mike Kelly, director of the international finance division of the finance ministry, said he has no idea how rumors got started in the last week that the department had a contingency plan in the drawer to control the flow of currency out of the country.

He said it would be difficult to find an official in the department who would recommend such a program to as a way of correcting the more than $4 billion deficit in the country's balance of payments. Chretien has denied such a plan exists.

CanCel Earnings Slump

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. reported today net earnings of $6.8 million or 55 cents a share in 1978, compared with $17.3 million or $1.41 a share the previous year.

Sales rose to $175.5 million from $161.1 million in 1977.

Cancel is one of the holdings in the B.C. Investment and Resources Corporation whose shares the government plans to give and sell to the public.

The company reported earnings of $5 million or 41 cents a share for the fourth quarter of 1978, compared with $3.3 million or 27 cents a share for the corresponding 1977 period. Sales were $46.5 million, compared with $41.6 million in the fourth quarter of 1977.

Donald Watson, president and chief executive officer, said the company's performance was affected by abnormally low prices for pulp and high operating and start-up costs of a $135 million kraft pulp project at Prince Rupert.

He said all the company's wood fibre conversion facilities were in full operation at the end of the year.

BOYS FACE FIRE COUNT

Colwood RCMP have charged two juvenile boys with arson in connection with the $100,000 fire at Belmont High School last Sunday.

A police spokesman said today the boys were arrested at their homes Thursday night.

They also have been charged with setting a minor fire at Dunsmuir School on Jan. 9 and breaking into 13 businesses in the Colwood area in the last month, the spokesman said.

Prospector Cashes In As VSE Urges Caution

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — While Vancouver Stock Exchange officials called for caution Thursday, Consolidated Cinola Mines Ltd. expressed faith in the company's Queen Charlotte Islands gold find by paying $390,000 to the man who discovered the deposit.

Nanaimo logger Ken Specogna was given the money after company directors exercised their option to buy his claim two months before the option to purchase at that price expires.

Specogna, 43, who lives in a modest middle-class home he says he doesn't plan to change or move from, said in an interview the money went straight into the bank and he is planning no major changes in his lifestyle.

Vancouver Stock Exchange officials moved to temper rumors of a modern-day gold rush, saying Consolidated's discovery needs much more work to be proved a mine.

Robert Scott, president of the exchange, told a news conference it is still uncertain how much gold can be recovered from the Vancouver-based firm's deposit.

"Caution would have to be the keynote," said Scott, adding that results from the deposit are encouraging but metallurgical, environmental and other studies have yet to be done.

Reflecting the caution, exchange officials decided not to permit resumption of trading in Consolidated Cinola stock until Monday.

Trading in the shares of Consolidated was halted last Monday after weekend reports of a gold rush to the Queen Charlottes and statements from company president Ken Sanders that the find was worth $2 billion.

When trading was stopped, exchange spokesmen explained it was to protect the investing public. Scott said Thursday that investors should not be car-

Watchdog Asks Why Prices Up

OTTAWA (CP) — The government [illegible] new inflation watchdog has asked 190 top corporations to provide it with up-to-date information on price increases and the reasons they are necessary.

The Centre for the Study of Inflation and Productivity today released copies of a letter sent to the top companies asking each to tell the centre if it implements a significant price increase.

The companies also are asked in a letter from director Robert Douglas to inform the centre of significant price changes in materials and services purchased by the company.

The announcement came as the government again faced criticism in the Commons over its admission that there is little it can do about price increases and the healthy increase in profits most industries have shown in the last year.

Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand has said in the last week he will study price and profit increases in the food and lumber industry and Bell Canada.

The government has asked both labor and business to exercise restraint to avoid setting off another round high inflation but with the expiry of the inflation controls program, has little clout to enforce it.

Woods, Shipyards Boosted

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government is giving Canada's profitable forest products industry $235 million to help upgrade production facilities in the next five to seven years to help keep it competitive in world markets.

The government also announced Thursday in a double-barrelled package that included incentives for shipbuilding, it will work out new agreements with the provinces to improve forest management and create new stocks of wood in badly-depleted forests.

Robert Andras, president of the new board of economic development ministers, told a news conference that money will be offered to the industry on a $3-for-$1 basis to pay up to 25 per cent of new machinery for pulp and paper plants across the country.

Money will also be available for pollution abatement equipment.

But Forests Minister Tom Waterland said in Victoria today B.C.'s pulp mills don't need federal subsidies.

"Our industry last year had a very good year," Waterland said. "Judging from one year's profits no subsidy is needed.

"If, over the long term, you have to begin to subsidize industry, you are better off without them," the minister said.

However Ray Williston, president of the province's B.C. Cellulose Corp., said the federal grant could be a gift from heaven.

B.C. Cellulose operates the province's oldest pulp mill at Ocean Falls.

Williston says the antiquated mill is facing major modernisation that could amount to as much as $80 million if it is to continue operating economically.

"Believe me we're certainly interested as far as Ocean Falls is concerned."

Waterland said he would have preferred to see the federal funds slated for the West go to forest management "to get on with growing bigger and fatter trees."

"Quite frankly, I don't believe in subsidizing anything," the minister added.

The government plans to sign new agreements with the five provinces that now have joint federal-provincial programs for forest management and development and to offer to work out an agreement with B.C.

The $235 million for improvements will be allocated in this way: $90 million

Was It Very Surprising?

"Inexcusable" is the word Premier Bill Bennett used for the B.C. Federation of Labor's brush-off of an invitation to meet with the cabinet this week to discuss labor issues.

At a series of public meetings, the organization has talked about the dire effects of new legislation regarding disputes in essential services, and "words like 'bloodbath' have been part of their statements," Bennett said. He thought the leaders of the federation would be glad to take their protests directly to the government.

His language in describing merely turning down a meeting with the government is rather strong, but was he seriously expecting an affirmative reply?

Two things suggest the latter. Bennett himself was invited to speak at the federation's rally in Kelowna on Thursday — which was arranged months ago — but he turned it down with a not very convincing explanation that his schedule, too, was made up weeks in advance. And the B.C. Chamber of Commerce, which was asked to appear before cabinet as well, also sent its regrets, pleading lack of time to prepare a brief. But only labor's refusal was "inexcusable?" Bennett's outrage seems more theatrical than genuine.

Labor leaders and cabinet ministers sitting down and sensibly discussing their political differences sounds reasonable and sensible. Anyone here opposed to reason and common sense? Of course not.

The catch is the government's timing. Extending an invitation to talk now is like being asked to shake hands and forgive and forget just after you've been hit over the head with a two-by-four.

This sort of thing cuts both ways. The federation remembers its first meeting with Bennett's government in the spring of 1976, a one-sided presentation by labor spokesmen of their annual brief to government. No questions, no discussion. They were politely ushered out the door after a mere 20 minutes.

But Bennett had a golden opportunity to improve relations last fall when the federation elected a new leader — Jim Kinnaird, former official in the B.C. labor department. He used some of the rhetoric of the hardliners, but clearly here was a more flexible and pragmatic spokesman for the province's unions, someone who would try to get along with whatever government was in power. So what happens?

The province intervenes with back-to-work legislation to end a dispute that closed schools in the Kootenays. Labor blustered about it, but could live with the special act, as it lived with equally sweeping abridgements of the collective bargaining process by the NDP government. But tacked onto the bill was a paragraph amending the existing emergency services legislation which gives the government a big new weapon — the legislature powerless to check its use — against labor in municipal and educational disputes.

This was serious enough, but to be told that this section wouldn't be proclaimed law until after careful study, then to have it quickly and quietly pushed through without explanation was to cut off Kinnaird's legs. He was left without much choice.

The premier may be annoyed at the federation's dismissal of his request for a meeting, but it can not have come as much of a suprise. Both sides have politicked themselves into certain postures and a snap invitation to talk sweet reason is not going to make the walls crumble.

Police Recruits

The Victoria police board made a good decision this week when it agreed to lift its restrictions on the age and height of recruits to the police force. Previously only persons who were between the ages of 19 and 28 could apply and male applicants had to be at least five feet, eight inches tall.

Although the minimum age will still apply (can you imagine the problems of a policeman too young to enter a pub?) the other requirements have now been lifted.

The police board members who opposed the change, Alf Hood and Janet Baird, made good points about the benefits of having young, tall police officers. They pointed out that since our community invests about $50,000 in the training of a police officer, it will get a better return on its investment from a young person who will serve the city longer before retirement.

They noted also that an influx of new, young blood makes the force energetic and responsive, and that the nature of the job sometimes requires large, strong people.

All those arguments are valid. But Hood and Baird have missed the main point. To lift the strict standards is not to say that the police force is suddenly going to start hiring nothing but 52-year-old dwarfs as its new recruits.

Those doing the hiring will still be able to choose the best applicants — and youth and a good physique, including height, are obviously going to be key criteria. As Chief Jack Gregory said, between two equally-qualified applicants, the younger, taller one will still have the edge.

What the change does accomplish is to make hiring a little more flexible. Now if a candidate with truly outstanding qualifications comes along, he won't be barred from consideration because he is 29 years old or only five feet, seven inches tall.

The average Victoria citizen will probably not see any difference in the makeup of the police force as a result of the change. The vast majority of junior police officers he sees will still be young and tall.

However, the change may mean that Victoria has one or two excellent police officers it would not otherwise have had because they would have been a little too old or a little too short to apply.

What Do Politicians Mean?

OTTAWA — Both the Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives appear confused and at each other's throats about what tack the federal government should take if the majority of Quebecers vote in favor of sovereignty-association.

Is the issue just a pre-electoral tempest in a teapot or a major controversy with dangerous implications for the survival of Confederation?

Whatever the answer, it must be remembered that Prime Minister Trudeau and Conservative Leader Joe Clark admit that both parties contain ardent federalists. Neither party would consciously aid the drive for Quebec independence.

'It Won't Be Me'

Trudeau has said negotiations with the Parti Quebecois on Quebec separation may be inevitable, yet other Liberals ridicule Conservatives for saying they would negotiate if the majority of Quebecers vote "yes" on the promised referendum.

In an interview with CTV at the close of 1977, Prime Minister Trudeau said:

"What I am saying basically is that if ever Quebecers by an overwhelming majority decide they no longer want to be part of this country, then they're going to sit down and negotiate with the rest of this country how they can be kept in.

"What I say at this point is I will not make them change their mind by force of law. I do say that somebody will have to sit down and negotiate with them and it won't be me."

John Reid, federal-provincial relations minister, believes the federal government must refuse to negotiate if the Parti Quebecois wins the referendum.

Reid expressed his opinion in an emotional attack on Conservative MP David Crombie, the former Toronto mayor who said it would be silly for the federal government not to negotiate.

"I am astonished by and in strong disagreement with Mr. David Crombie's televised statement . . . that it would be silly to refuse to negotiate sovereignty association with the government of Quebec," Reid said.

"Mr. Crombie's statement can only reinforce the impression that prominent Conservative spokesmen, including the leader of the party, do not understand the nature of sovereignty-association or the goals of the Parti Quebecois and their implications for the unity of Canada."

Clark quickly repudiated Crombie's statement by saying a Conservative government would never negotiate sovereignty-association.

Crombie then altered his tune, after the Conservatives suffered embarrassing political jibes from the Liberals, by saying he would not negotiate Quebec out of Confederation but that discussions between Ottawa and Quebec City must always continue.

"Of course we will talk with the people if the referendum which is to be held, presumably in Quebec, is passed by a majority. It is either that or allow the country to go down the tube and that is certainly not what I intend to do."

That statement only evoked another round of ridicule by Liberals, including Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve, who described the Tories as "politically naive."

Claude Morin, Quebec's intergovernmental affairs minister, says politicians in English Canada are spouting nonsense when they say they will refuse to negotiate sovereignty-association even if the Parti Quebecois government wins its independence referendum.

Dictionary Will Help

"These statements on a refusal to negotiate, no matter what happens, are about as crazy as those of a manager who tells workers who want to go on strike: 'Go ahead and strike, I won't negotiate'," Morin told the CBC Tuesday.

When the dust clears, it may turn out the Liberals and Conservatives hold identical views and that all the fuss was a semantical misunderstanding.

Jean-Luc Pepin, co-chairman of the Task Force on Canadian Unity, says the terminology associated with the national unity debate is highly confusing. To set the record straight, the task force plans to publish soon a dictionary explaining such key phrases as sovereignty association. Perhaps he will even define the word negotiation for some confused politicians.

No renewal of timber licences without a public hearing, readers say.

Not to Be Borne

The arrogance with which Tom Waterland has dismissed public hearings on renewals of tree farm licences, in particular TFL 24 on the southern Queen Charlotte Islands, is clearly at odds with the very real concern of many groups and individuals affected by the proposed logging.

Among those who support public hearings on the renewal of TFL 24 are the Queen Charlotte Islands Public Advisory Committee to the Forestry Service, the QCI Handloggers Association, Masset and Skidegate band councils, the Graham Island advisory planning committee, the Northern Trollers' Association, the UFAWU, the B.C. Trappers' Association, the Southern Moresby Wilderness Proposal Symposium of November 1977, the Federation of B.C. Naturalists, the Sierra Club, all opposition MLAs and Iona Campagnola, federal MP for Skeena.

Too many serious questions about the adverse effects of the proposed logging have been raised for Waterland to decide to renew TLFs "on the basis of what is really best for the industry." Such a criterion clearly contravenes the concept of multiple use forestry, (to which the logging industry pays no more than lip service), which is "the deliberate and carefully planned integration of various uses so as to interfere with each other as little as possible and to supplement each other as much as possible." The clearcutting methods of the large logging companies are carried out at the expense of the fisheries, the recreational user and the forest's own ecosystems. The silting up of spawning streams, the pollution of watersheds, extensive soil erosion and deterioration and loss of natural habitat for forest dwelling species and the resulting collapse of the ecosystems within which they play a part are all predictable effects of clearcutting.

Further, the industry's claim that such methods are the only economically feasible way to operate is seriously in question. Waste within the industry itself, as well as research indicating that selective logging can be as efficient, or more so, than clearcutting, with no loss of revenue or jobs, reinforce the urgent need for public hearings to examine critically these concerns.

It is not to be borne that a publicly elected official, one of our servants, should treat the people of the province as nobodies whose voices matter nothing in the disposal of our own forests. — Paddy McGrath, 308-3142 Cedar Hill Road.

TFL Renewals

We believe that public involvement in the renewal of tree farm licences is a basic issue in the managment of Crown forest land.

The first tree farm licence scheduled for renewal under the new Forest Act is TFL 24 held by Rayonier Canada Ltd. on the southern islands of the Queen Charlotte Islands. On Jan. 9, the ministry of forests made an offer to Rayonier to renew this TFL, and announced that public hearings would not be held.

This does not only affect us in the Queen Charlottes and TFL 24. It sets a precedent which will be used for all TFLs and for all of B.C. Remember that 26 tree farm licences, scattered throughout B.C. are scheduled for renewal in the next 24 months.

Public hearings are the only forum for consideration of the effects of forest management on community stability, environmental quality, and future options in forestry. Without this forum, the licence holders will not be accountable to the public and will have little incentive to manage the forests in the best interests of local communities or the province.

We urge you to join us in requesting public hearings on all tree farm licence renewals, and specifically for TFL 24, by writing to Premier Bill Bennett and Forests Minister Tom Waterland at the Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C. to indicate your support for TFL renewal hearings. — Paul George, The United People Against TFL Automatic Renewals, Queen Charlotte City.

Incensed at Unions

I have just finished reading your excellent paper and am incensed at what the labor unions are doing to Britain.

Whatever injustices they believe are being perpetrated against them, they can never ever justify this latest strike action. The country was just beginning to recover from near bankruptcy when the unions hit it again. Can't they see that by crippling their own country they are undermining their own personal situation?

It is stupidity on an obscene level. And don't doubt for a minute that the labor leaders in Canada don't envy and covet the power wielded by their compatriots in Britain. They would dearly love to have such strength. We can hand them this if we vote for their political party, the NDP, in the next election. Or we can try and prevent it by voting for someone else. The choice is ours and we cannot pretend ignorance if we disregard the vivid example Britain is showing us.

Don't think it can't happen here. We are more like them than we are to any other country, even down to our British-born union leaders. — Don Madclean, Saanichton.

Put a Little In

The enthusiasm, however misplaced, and the continued unmitigated gall of Mr. Bev Highton, president, Victoria Real Estate Board in his "to hell with the community, let's make money" philosophy, leaves me aghast.

Having recently advocated the removal of the municipal zoning policy on the grounds that our elected representatives are not qualified to serve our interests he now advocates, at taxpayers' expense of course, an advertising campaign to bring all the grandmothers and dranddads of Alberta and Ontario to Victoria (Realtors Urge Retirement Pitch; Times, Jan. 15).

Why? Well, not because he has their interests at heart and our "balmier" cimate will be easier on the old folk as opposed to the spine-chilling winters of Alberta and Ontario, but rather because without such an influx of persons easily parted from their money the Victoria housing prices will remain soft in 1979.

It would of course be unthinkable that this be allowed to happen and that those already living here and finding it difficult to meet the high prices be afforded a ray of hope, for who wants stability in housing costs — certainly not the real estate developers.

For your enlightenment, Mr. Highton, you should understand that the people and property in Victoria are not here for the sole purpose of providing you and your fraternity with a high source of revenue, and you'd be making a more positive contribution to society if you took a little less out of the common pot and put a little more in. — A. J. Broome, 2275 Dunlevy Street.

Barbaric Practice

Since my belief is that abortion is an entirely unjustified and cruel, indeed barbaric, practice and that outside of rare exceptions which only prove the rule's benignity, it should not be encouraged as it is today in Canada, I suppose I may count as an anti-abortionist the sort of person maligned in Leonard Shifrin's article Anti-Abortionists Curb Free Speech (Times, Jan. 10).

Certainly, if the Planned Parenthood Federation advocates abortion as a method of "planning parenthood," I heartily agree with MP Ursula Appolloni that it deserves to have its operating grant cut off. Imagine citizens' tax money being used for such a purpose! Barbaric isn't a strong enough word.

The "small Catholic paper", as Mr. Shifrin calls the National Catholic Reporter, is not in any sense small, either in circulation or influence, among journals devoted to religion. Nor is NCR "Catholic" in any official sense whatsoever; its editorials are mere opinion. I read the editorial mentioned and have nothing but contempt for its sophist argument. The conclusion it teaches — that the public is being led to believe "that anti-abortion is what Roman Catholicism solely stands for in the social, economic and political arena" — is entirely untrue. If the public believes that, it'll believe anything.

If one must use labels, I am an anti-abortionist who believes in free speech, although I'm thoroughly sick of the stupid whining of the anti-life fanatics who argue "women should have control over their own bodies" when what they really mean is "pregnant women should decide whether or not to have an abortion, without any sanction in law to dissuade them" — women who, by becoming pregnant in the first place, have clearly already relinquished control over their bodies, to men. — Robin Terry, 524 Dallas Road.

Waste of Money

I wish that Bill Bennett's proposed action of giving away B.C. Resources Investment Corporation shares were only a comical hollow gesture, but it goes beyond this.

The assumption that we will be grateful for receiving a share of something we already own is insulting. I will now have to make specific application to receive something worth much less than its cost to me in increased taxes. Anyone who fails to play the game will simply pay and lose.

Considerable resources will be wasted in the application for printing and distribution of shares.

The only group which will benefit from this publicly-funded sham is the public relations and advertising industry. Specifically, those firms which support the Social Credit party at election time. They will be well-paid with tax dollars to provide investment advice and party propaganda to the public. — M. Wheatley, Victoria.

Henry Ford Cited In $2M Cash Rakeoff from Marcos

NEW YORK (AP) — A stockholder's suit against Henry Ford II charges that he took a $2 million cash payment from the wife of Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos and a $750,000 "kickback" from a food concessionaire.

It alleges he deposited the illegal funds in Swiss banks and a Liechtenstein trust.

Court papers filed this week and obtained Thursday also describe how Ford allegedly misused Ford Motor Co. funds to create an unparalleled lifestyle for himself, his "close friend," Kathleen DuRoss, and members of his family.

Company funds were used, the papers allege, for plane trips for his mother's dogs and cats and for a $2.7-million spiral staircase in the company's headquarters to provide access from his private dining room to a "suite kept available for his afternoon rest."

The stockholders, represented by lawyer Roy Cohn, are seeking $50 million in damages. The new charges are contained in a document of more than 100 pages filed with Justice Arnold Fraiman in Manhattan Supreme Court in reply to interrogatories filed by Ford lawyers seeking the basis for earlier charges by the stockholders.

The document charges that Marcos' wife, Imelda, gave Ford $2 million in cash during a visit to Michigan in return for the promise that the company would build an auto parts plant in the Philippines.

The papers also charge that Ford made a "sweetheart" deal with the Canteen Corp., which has an exclusive concession to provide food and beverages in all Ford offices and factories.

Testube Baby's Birth Shown

To Mrs. Brown, A Daughter, a documentary film showing the actual conception and cesarean birth of the world's first test-tube baby, will be shown in its entirety for the first time on North American television at 8 p.m. Sunday on Channel 9.

When 5-pound, 12-ounce Louise Brown was born at 11:47 p.m. last July 28 in the dowdy English mill town of Oldham, her birth was hailed as a medical miracle in some quarters, but others viewed it as the first chapter of a potential horror story.

Some researchers applauded the success of Dr. Patrick Steptoe and Dr. Robert Edwards, the gynecologist and physiologist, respectively, who actually created Louise in the laboratory. But many philosophers issued grim warnings that the "Brave New World" of novelist Aldous Huxley had arrived.

Such misgivings, however, were far from the minds of Louise's parents. And thousands of infertile women drew hope from the pregnancy of Mrs. Brown, whom doctors had declared was unable to have a child.

The documentary presents both sides of the question, intermingling the viewpoints of the parents, the physicians, the ethicists and other childless couples, and mixing humanistic arguments with scientific ones.

Sylvester Stallone, Talia Shire in Rocky

Stallone's Story Basis for Rocky

Like the hero of his smash-hit motion picture, Rocky, Sylvester Stallone, previously an unknown, struggled against seemingly impossible odds to emerge a winner.

The Oscar-winning movie will be broadcast for the first time on television, as a special at 8 p.m. Sunday on channels 7 and 8.

Ironically, Rocky became possible because of Stallone's early lack of success as a actor. When his career seemed headed nowhere, he began writing screenplays.

But California is full of script writers.

It was the script for Rocky that changed his luck. He was inspired by the Chuck Wepner-Muhammad Ali fight, when Wepner managed not only to knock Ali down but to last the full 15 rounds.

The studios took immediate interest in Rocky, but they wanted it for an established box-office name.

Stallone, however, had himself in mind for the role. He got his way, but with a personal risk. Rather than the big figures he previously had been offered, Stallone settled for a percentage of the profits.

It was a gamble that paid off handsomely. The film went on to become one of the all-time biggest moneymakers.

SNOOPY'S BACK AS A VALENTINE

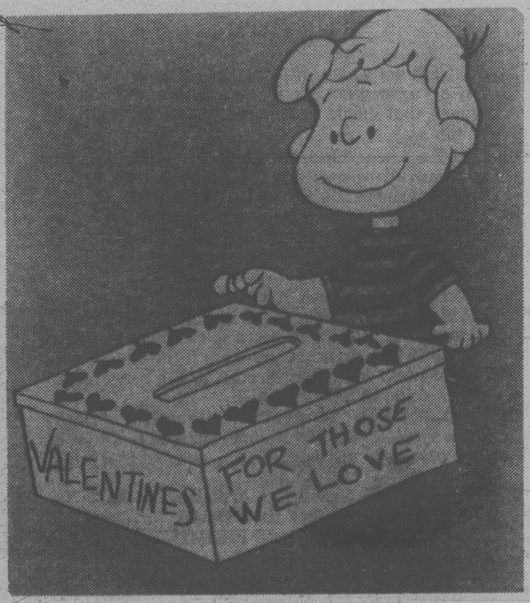
How are you going to keep a beagle down on the doghouse after he's seen the moon?

When your dog, like Snoopy, Charlie Brown's pet canine, is a ball-playing art connoisseur who fancies himself a First World War flying ace, plays the accordion and quotes Shakespeare, you already have a few problems. If, like Snoopy, he also happens to be an astronaut who "can't sleep without a night light," you could really use some outside help — even if the only help available is from an unpredictable psychiatrist like Lucy, who charges seven cents to confuse and insult you.

Snoopy, who compounds Charlie Brown's disappointment at receiving no valentines by jumping out of his master's empty mailbox and scaring him dizzy, in Be My Valentine, Charlie Brown, animated Peanuts special to be rebroadcast at 8 p.m. Friday on channels 2 and 7, with Schroeder, Lucy, Pig Pen and all the rest of the Peanuts crew.

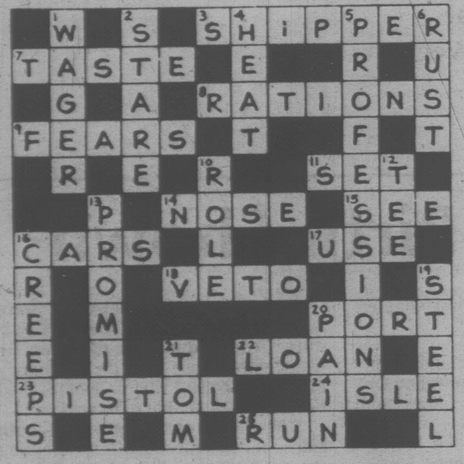
It is not surprising that when Charlie Brown's teacher once asked him to draw a real dog, he failed.

"I'll just have to tell her I don't know any real dogs," mused Snoopy's master.



PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS

3. SHIPPER not shopper. The clue's business-like term "costs, etc." (rather than prices) suits SHIPPER better.
7. TASTE not waste. As the clue implies, there is a TASTE, which "may be pretty bad"; but even if there is waste, it hardly rates as "bad" in the circumstances mentioned.
8. RATIONS not nations. "RATIONS" normally mean food, thus linking up especially readily with the idea of undernourishment if they are poor. Poor nations are deprived in all ways.
9. FEARS not tears. FEARS are more in the nature of a process of thought, "based on an idea." Tears are simply a reaction to distress, etc.
14. NOSE not hose. One's NOSE is not blocked "in the normal course of events." One doesn't expect a hose to get blocked at all, really.
15. SEE not sew. "Generally" it's pretty usual (i.e., for people) to SEE things in one place or another. To sew is a more specific act, and less apt.
16. CARS not cart. The last six words of the clue are wanted more for CARS.
18. VETO not vets. Bearing in mind that war vets are such a large and varied group, the idea of disagreement suits VETO better.
20. PORT not poet. Since there is little call to associate poets with richness anyway, PORT (wine) is more apt.
23. PISTOL not piston. The idea of "workmanship" suggests something more elaborately fashioned than a piston.
25. RUN not fun. RUN is comprehensively apt, whether or not it is thought of as "fun."

CLUES DOWN:

1. WAGER not wages. Strictly speaking, it is a promise or agreement on wages, rather than actual wages, that should be honored. WAGER is more apt in this way.
4. HEAT not heal. Since things that won't heal up can be positively worrying or incapacitating, the idea of mere begrudged delay suits HEAT better.
5. PROFESSIONS not processions. People marching in processions are not really concerned with advancing, in any real sense of getting forward or ahead progressively.
6. RUST not ruse or rush. A ruse that is seen through is apt to collapse without requiring any positive counter measure. "RUST" is more self-explanatory than "rush," which would be more apt if the clue provided a context indicating a rush in the sense of an attack (e.g., in football, etc.).
10. ROLE not pole. "Straight" (legitimate or serious) has a specially apt significance applied to a ROLE. One assumes, anyway, that a pole is a straight one.
13. PROMISE not premise. A premise is a basis for after-reasoning, rather than simply for expecting something to follow — as a PROMISE leads one to do.

JAIMIE LYN BAUER . . . takes baby on set

MART HULSWIT . . . moonlighting off Broadway

The Very Young and Restless

Soap Opera Scene

By JOHN N. GOUDAS

"Need a ten-month-old Caucasian who speaks Spanish?" asks Jaime Lyn Bauer, who plays Lorie on The Young and The Restless.

Miss Bauer is referring to her baby son Damien, who is also known as the mascot of CBS Television City. When mom arrives for work occasionally with Damien, word gets out fast, and everyone comes running from The Price Is Right, Dinah, and Three's Company, shows taped at CBS, to see how the kid is getting along.

Damien is something special at CBS. Jamie Lyn Bauer, separated from her husband Richard Goldstein, has been known to bring her baby son to work when her housekeeper is sick. Damien earned notices before he was born in March, 1978. CBS performers, secretaries and crews all got to know Jamie when she was pregnant, and worried about the forthcoming child, because the actress had a history of miscarriages, and they knew she wanted a child so badly.

Written out of the soap for four weeks before Damien's birth, Jamie returned exactly four weeks after the great event took place in Phoenix (Jamie's hometown), last spring. Since Jamie was breastfeeding her son, Damien came along. As a result, a good deal of his first year on earth is being spent at CBS Television City, where stars and workers watch his progress month by month.

The youngster made his TV debut last summer for a couple of minutes on The Dinah Show, and managed another two minutes on The Mike Douglas Show before a cooing host.

Surrounded by friends since birth, young Damien is an outgoing, bright baby with a sense of humor. He gets colds easily because of contact with so many, but emotionally he's far ahead of his age.

As for mom well, it hasn't been easy, working all day at the studio three days a week, coming home to memorize a daily average of 16 pages of dialogue, and taking care of her baby son. In those early months last spring, up three times a night to feed Damien, Jamie Lyn struggled along on very little sleep. Live-in help, a lovely lady from San Salvador, with nine children of her own, made it possible for Jamie to function as a working mom, and raise a child on her own.

So Jamie has become a favorite with the CBS crowd, and Damien has turned out to be a wow. While The Young and The Restless cast go over notes prior to rehearsal, Damien in his walker can often be seen moving around the table engrossed in paper.

Since becoming a mother, Jamie has noticed changes in her temperament. She used to go all out for an emotional scene in rehearsal, then hold back until taping, knowing it would flow on command, but now Jamie must retain her concentration throughout. The old buttons are not so reliable, so the actress must seek other means.

"It's harder to do depressing, emotional sequences when you're happy," Jamie observes. "But having Damien is the most wonderful thing that's ever happened to me."

CHANNEL CHATTER

Mart Hulswit, the popular Dr. Ed Bauer in Guiding Light, was busy doing double duty recently. In addition to appearing on the soap, he had a major role in the off-Broadway showcase production titled Summer People . . . On March 5th, another milestone in TV soap will be recorded. It marks the first telecast of the new expanded format of Another World. The very popular soap goes from one hour running time to 90 minutes daily. Soaps have certainly come a long way from the days when they were 15-minute entries way back in the early '50s. For those who keep track of such things, Another World debuted as a half hour soap on May 4, 1964. How time flies when you're having a good time watching others suffer . . . Stage and screen actor Joseph Maher recently completed a brief stint as Whitney Foxten, manager of Lucille Wexler's properties in Chicago, on Guiding Light. The producers and writers were so pleased with his work that Maher may be back in a more prominent light in the near future . . . Peg Murray, who is the sympathetic Carrie Lovett in Love of Life, received great notices for her performance in the Tennessee Williams play, A Lovely Sunday for Creve Coeur, which is currently playing off-Broadway . . . Joel Crothers (Dr. Miles Cavanaugh in Edge of Night) made a rare singing appearance in New York City recently at the supper club, Les Mouches. Joel enjoys singing and hopes to do more of it, in addition to appearing in the soap opera . . . Veteran actor George Voskovec, who has a good role in the upcoming sequel to Roots will appear in a limited role in Guiding Light this month. He'll portray a character named George Wolfe, a wealthy cosmopolitan residing in the South of France who provides the setting, his elaborate yacht, for a major event on the soap.

PLOT PORTENTS

Steve is feeding sister Julie lies again on Days of Our Lives, trying to make something out of Doug's friendship with troubled Maggie. Meanwhile, Mickey tells Laura he's afraid of losing Maggie. With his head turned by Stephanie, David had better pull himself back together again because Trish is back in the picture. At least Mike is on cloud nine since Margo was released from this hospital. Leukemia tests are O.K., but for how long no one knows, and wedding plans are being wrapped up for Don and Marlena — they might make it this time.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. In watching numerous reruns of Jack Webb's Adam-12 and Emergency, I frequently see an actress named Virginia Gregg.

She's very versatile because she plays roles ranging from a hooker and a lush to a hysterical mother and saintly nun.

Despite all this television exposure, I find very little information about her. Can you fill me in? Also, what's her relationship to Webb? — B.E., Hanover Park, Ill.

A. Virginia Gregg is one of Hollywood's finest character actresses, although she also can turn in solid performances in more serious, dramatic roles.

She met Webb when he was producing the original radio version of Dragnet. She was in most of the radio episodes and Webb was so impressed with her talents that as he expanded into television, he brought her along.

She has appeared several times in all of Webb's television programs, including Dragnet, Adam-12, Emergency and Project UFO.

She was born in Harrisburg, Ill., and when she was 6, her family moved to Pasadena, Calif. An interest in music at Washington Junior High School led to drama and her involvement at the Pasadena Playhouse and the Shakespearean Club.

Radio acting became her forte in the 1940s and she appeared in a variety of roles on just about every radio program originating from Hollywood. She made her movie debut in the 1947 John Garfield film Body and Soul.

Her long movie credits include I'll Cry Tomorrow, Casbah, Love Is a Many Splendored Thing, Webb's D.I. and Operation Petticoat. She recently appeared in the remake of Little Women.

Gregg is a widow and resides in west Los Angeles. She has three adult sons.

Q. Where can I write to MGM Studios and Paramount Pictures? — M.A., Victoria, B.C.

A. The addresses are: MGM Studios, 10202 W. Washington Blvd., Culver City, Calif. 90230 and Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90038.

Q. Wasn't Dirk Benedict of Battlestar Galactica in the series Chopper One? — C.S.E., Albany, Ga.

A. Yes, he was a regular in the short-lived series. In fact, it was his first regular role.

Q. There's a commercial making the rounds where a man in kilts extols the virtues of a product called Scotch Buy. If I didn't know better, I'd say the guy is Ray Bolger but I thought he died a few years back. Who is the man? — J.W., Livermore, Calif.

A. The man doing the jig while hawking Scotch Buy is Ray Bolger, who not only is still alive but turned 73 on Jan. 10.

Q. How many different actresses have played the wife, Alice, in Jackie Gleason's The Honeymooners? — J.P., Pittsburgh, Pa.

A. Pert Kelton was the original Alice when The Honeymooners was part of the Cavalcade of Stars show in 1950. Ralph Krampden's wife was also played by Audrey Meadows and Sheila MacRae.

Q. Are Farah Fawcett-Majors and Lee Majors getting a divorce? I hear rumors that they are and some that they're still together. Please straighten this out for me. — B.P., Warren, Ohio.

A. As media stars who generate plenty of stories about their private lives to satisfy the instiable public preoccupation with entertainment personalities, Farrah and Lee Majors are subjected to all kinds of rumors, most of them untrue.

"They are not getting a divorce. However, that may not be the case next week, next month or next year. In Tinseltown, marriages come and go like sunrises and sunsets. But so far, your rumor is false.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, Prevue, Victoria Press, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4.

Sulkies Take To Ice

Canada's leading racing drivers will compete in an eight-race card of harness racing on the ice of Ottawa's Rideau Canal as part of CBC-TV's unique two-hour "live" Winterlude at 2 p.m. Sunday on Channel 2.

Harness racing on ice, dating from pre-Confederation times, disappeared from the Canadian racing scene by the 1920's. In this revival, the pacers and trotters, fitted with special caulk-studded shoes, will compete for the Canadian Club Ice Racing Trophy and $4,000 in purses over a quarter-mile course between Ottawa's Pretoria Bridge and Fifth Avenue.

Edward Splits U.K. Audiences

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

LONDON (CP) — British audiences are split down the middle in their attitude toward the TV drama, Edward and Mrs. Simpson, produced here by the commercial Thames Television network for broadcast in numerous countries.

In Britain, the seven-part film has revived all the old arguments concerning the abdiction of Edward VIII from the British throne in December, 1936.

Many regard him as a weak, self-indulgent king who turned his back on Britain and the Commonwealth. Others see him as a strong-willed man who stood up to the government of the day and remained loyal to the woman he loved.

"I'm a king's man myself," says a 63-year-old naval veteran. "What would the nation have thought of a king who bowed to pressure from the government to have Mrs. Simpson sent away? Not much, I'll wager."

"He renaged on his duty," a middle-aged housewife offers. "He was trained for kingship and he should have placed his duty to Britain and the Commonwealth above all else."

Whatever their opinions, most viewers agree that British actor Edward Fox and American-born Cynthia Harris have given life and depth to their difficult roles. And the film has been praised for its historical accuracy, although historians will long continue to argue over certain aspects of it.

With a budget of more than £1 million, Thames Television spared no effort to capture the style and atmosphere of the period. For instance, the clothes worn by Fox as the fashion-conscious Edward were stitched by the same Saville Row tailors who served the king 40 years ago.

And the famous wedding dress worn by Cynthia Harris as Mrs. Simpson is more than just a meticulous copy. It was made from the last existing bolt of the same type of 1936 material. Like the original, it had no zip fastener.

The costume budget soared every time a scene was re-written or a new character added to the script. At the end of shooting, it alone was estimated at more than £60,000.

Spine-Tingling Mixture Of Murders, Monsters

Anthony Perkins, who horrified millions of moviegoers as the psychotic killer in Alfred Hitchcock's 1960 thriller Psycho, will host a two-hour retrospective of the motion pictures that made us squirm in our seats and fear the darkness.

The Horror Show: 60 Magical Years of Movie Monsters, Madmen and Other Creatures of the Night, will be seen as a special at 9 p.m. Tuesday on Channel 7.

From the silent motion picture classic The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari (1920), to the more recent thrillers, The Omen (1976) and Jaws (1975), the special explores 60 motion pictures spanning half of a century.

Such favorite films as King Kong (1933), The Fly (1958), Dracula (1931), The Phantom of the Opera (1925) and The Hunchback of Notre Dame (1923) will be included in the program, as will other films including Psycho (1960), Creature From the Black Lagoon (1954) Willard (1970), The Day the Earth Stood Still (1951), The Incredible Shrinking Man (1957), The Birds (1963) and the ever-popular Frankenstein (1931).

PERKINS

Jack Nicholson as the unbalanced Randle P. McMurphy

Mental Care Bearded In the Cuckoo's Nest

Jack Nicholson stars in One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, the story of a non-conformist who has himself committed to a mental hospital to escape the work farm where he's been serving time for assault.

It will be broadcast at 8 p.m. Tuesday on Channel 8.

This stunning adaptation of Ken Kesey's novel deservedly won five Academy Awards: Best Actor, Jack Nicholson as the rebellious Randle P. McMurphy; Best Actress, Louise Fletcher as the malevolent Nurse Ratched; Best Picture; Best Direction and Best Screenplay.

In One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, the inmates of a mental ward are led by Randle P. McMurphy, a rebel — albeit a sane one, who challenges the power structure of the sanitarium, personified by a middle-aged maddeningly placid, devious nurse named Miss Ratched. Known to the inmates as "Big Nurse", she exacts control over the ward by weekly therapy sessions and doles out approval and help in minute bits. McMurphy creates havoc and rebellion in the ward. He attempts to instill the inmates with a sense of pride in themselves and teaches them to have fun, but to no avail. Like a dictator crushing a rebellion, "Big Nurse", crushes newly-found identities and spirits. In the end, McMurphy is a tragic and permanent loser.

Tudor Style, with Modern Comfort

This charmingly traditional Tudor design, finished in mixed stucco, brick and board, and with cedar shake or shingled roof, offers the ultimate in visual appeal while providing for maximum comfort, convenience and flexibility of interior layout.

The sunken, L-shaped living-dining room combination, with its diamond-paned windows, emphasizes the mood of warmth and conviviality which this home possesses. The dining room separates via pocket door from the kitchen-nook combination, providing privacy for formal dining.

Practicality, comfort and convenience are the characteristics of the kitchen-nook and family room combination. The well-planned galley-style kitchen has an interesting corner sink and good natural light. The nook may be finished as either a snack bar counter or as a full dining facility. The family room area features a corner brick fireplace, complete with barbeque feature on the patio side, affording the young family the greatest possible convenience for casual indoor or relaxed outdoor dining.

A wide rear patio, connected to the family room via sliding glass doors, and a two-piece vanity bathroom, central to all rooms, complete the downstairs conveniences of this home design.

Depending upon family size, the upstairs may be finished with either three or four bedrooms. With either layout, the master will have a three-piece ensuite bath with shower, and all the bedrooms will have good natural light and generous closets.

The attic, accessible from the upstairs hallway, allows ample upstairs storage space, or may be finished as a play area or family lounge for smaller children. The full basement provides ample storage area, or may be finished as a further recreational facility.

Plans for design no. 76-1666 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $70 for the first set and $10 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $100 and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $125.

Looking At Stars

By RUTH THOMPSON

A thirst for facts, friends on the inside who talk . . . and lotsa luck helped Scene land its scoop-and-a-half on lively Deirdre Hall, Dr. Marlene Evans on NBC's daytimer, Days of Our Lives. A reader wants to know if there is a romance on the horizon for Deidre? For stuff like this, even Sherlock Holmes needs an informant.

"In which guise?" asked the insider we queried. Then the answer. In Days of Our Lives, Deidra (as Marlena) finally marries Don Craig (Jed Allen).

In real life? Well . . . nobody's talking. Except a psychic who told Deidre that a dreamboat will materialize and lure her away from the mini-mansion she now shares with her identical twin, Andrea Hall.

When you scan the lists of stars who repeatedly get cracks at new shows, the names for the weekly series usually are male, and the same half-dozen who have registered big with viewers in the past: Raymond Burr, Glenn Ford, John Forsythe, Dennis Weaver, Peter Graves and Andy Griffith. It was Andy who was dealt another round — by ABC — with the premiere of Salvage I.

Should the females take umbrage? Maybe no. Some of the gals wooed by the networks shrewdly hold out for occasional specials instead of the weekly grind. NBC already has Ann-Margret . . . and now ABC is reportedly tying up Goldie Hawn, the most illustrious graduate of Laugh-In, on a now-and-then, big-budget deal.

An actor turns down a job? Handsome gray-around-the temples John Gabriel says five years ago it would have struck him, too, as heresy.

But he's had to nix a shot at being an American James Bond in a new movie because it might jeopardize what he's got going for him as Dr. Senecca Beaulac in ABC's Ryan's Hope.

He does, however, have enough moonlighting compensations on tap to make life lovely.

John Hearn's Collectibles

Hilda Jollife of Scarborough asks if I have any tips to offer about collecting children's books.

The answer to that one goes far beyond the scope of this short column, but since there are few more delightful and potentially valuable collectibles, lets talk about it.

Traditionally you have two main types, pulp churned out for the mass market and those books which have attracted the best of writers and the best of illustrators. Fortunately, there are vast numbers of the latter and they are still being published.

Lets dispose of the first group. You will remember them as large format 'annuals' printed in big type on thick paper. There is nothing against them other than the fact that they were of little artistic merit and the material itself was highly biodegradable. If they are of any value fifty years later it is more through the miracle of sheer survival than any intrinsic worth.

The second field is an endless treasure trove. Children's literature as such dates back to the mid 19th century and the genius of Edward Lear and Lewis Carroll (or Charles Dodgson to be more precise). For the first time there was a departure from religious tracts and schoolbooks and once the world of beautiful nonsense was opened up, in came the illustrators of beautiful nonsense. First editions of Alice in Wonderland, Swiss Family Robinson, Little Women, Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn, Kidnapped and Treasure Island are now worth a small fortune. Way up there in the high price bracket are the more recent classics — Winnie the Pooh, for example, or Charlotte's Web.

As important as the book itself is the illustrator — Tenniel, E.H. Shepard, N.C. Wyeth, Howard Pyle, Norman Rockwell, Arthur Rackham — any old book, children's or otherwise, with their illustrations is automatically that much more valuable.

There are two fundamental problems confronting the would-be collector of children's books — condition and indentifcation. Children are not famous for the tender care they bestow on their books and whereas in other areas of collecting, mint condition is mandatory, collectors of children's books must be prepared to settle for something less. Condition still affects the price, of course, but tatty volumes which would be unacceptable in other classifications of book collecting, are to be treasured.

One other tip, collect modern children's books — especially Canadian originals -- a 1st edition of Dennis Lee's 'Alligator Pie' ought to be worth $1,000 by the year 2050. Wrap it carefully.

BOOKS

Pat Barclay

Judy LaMarsh claims her first novel, A Very Political Lady, is fiction. So it is, but it's fiction with the kind of relationship to fact that this sentence has to the alphabet. The basic components have been re-arranged, shuffled and combined into more or less original patterns, but underlying all this heavy activity is the same old alphabet we know so well.

Without Canada's recent political past to inspire and goad her, Judy LaMarsh would not have written this book. Its purpose, apart from the natural human desire to make money, is to "get" Prime Minister Trudeau.

Consider these few extracts: "The ways of the prime minister, Jean Jacques Charles, were not to be questioned. Enigmatic and haughty, he was like a high priest except that he believed in no one but himself."

"He never pitted himself against others, only against himself. Jean Jacques Charles, the son of a gracious French-Canadian mother and a self-made English millionaire father, was an enigma."

"Jacques, are you aware of how eagerly the business community of this country awaits your downfall? Do you know how you have antagonized organized labor? Do you have any idea how you have turned off the ethnic leaders? How angry you have made monarchists all over the country by your cavalier treatment of Her Majesty?" (The speaker is Carter Warden, a former "doughty minister of finance" with the previous Liberal administration who dresses in dark-colored, pin-striped suits and knows everybody. He and LaMarsh have only just begun to list Charles' sins.)

There's also this sly dig, my favorite: "As the maid bearing the tray of empty glasses passed him, (Charles) said: 'A mineral water please, but not the Perrier.' "

Clearly, A Very Political Lady is a roman a clef of ambitious proportions. (Note: The literal translation of roman a clef is "story with a key." Or skeleton key, as in this case.)

The novel's other characters include a current minister of finance (Hume Frazier) who is "handsome, almost pretty . . ." with "a funny, jerky way of talking" and who is dumb enough to sign an abortion consent at an Ottawa hospital, posing as his lover's husband; and Evangeline, the prime minister's wife, who's a 42-year-old ingenue with "great topaz eyes" and a "warm and sweet and unaffected" disposition. (She's also a Cajun folk singer from the Louisiana bayou country.)

There's one other main character, a paragon of all the maidenly virtues named Kathleen Marshal. (Note the one-l spelling of Marshal. Tricky, eh?) This large, fiftyish lady with long, black, braided hair is PM Charles' minister of justice and a former interim PM herself, following the death in office of Alexander (Sandy) Sinclair.

LaMARSH . . . to make money and "get" Trudeau

The less said about Kathleen Marshal is probably the better. Anyway, the LaMarsh view of her has already been summed up by Sylvia Fraser in this passage from her novel A Casual Affair:

"Fairytales were important to her. She saw them as . . . a distillation of the secret yearnings that press on us from the inside, like invisible cords . . . just when we want to be most reasonable. She believed all of us . . . write our own fairytales, and that if we could discover these we could understand our own past, our own present . . . get glimpses of our future."

A Very Political Lady opens with its heroine bravely shepherding a bill to de-criminalize abortion through the House, and ends with a Liberal party convention to choose a new leader. No prizes will be awarded for guessing the name of Canada's newly-crowned PM. Yes. Really. I kid you not.

LaMarsh's book is good fun, in its way, for more reasons than LaMarsh intended. The writing is a peculiar mixture of slush and vinegar, with the occasional clanger dropped in for added spice. ("(Charles) treats his associates as if they were children, but it's he who acts like one.") Its gossipy tone and ex-insider's know-how lend it a deceptively up-to-the-minute atmosphere, for the Quebec dilemma is ignored and LaMarsh seems never to have heard of Joe Clark. (The leader of the opposition is a distinguished gent named Richard Sherwood.)

Will it hurt Trudeau at the polls? If you read this column last week, you may remember that Rupert Brooke died of a gnat bite, a fate which does give one pause for thought.

On the other hand, there's the example of Underdog, the well-known superhero. So the probable effect of A Very Political Lady is anybody's guess. Personally, I'm betting that it'll be nominated for the Stephen Leacock Award.

A VERY POLITICAL LADY, by Judy LaMarsh. McClelland & Stewart. $12.95.

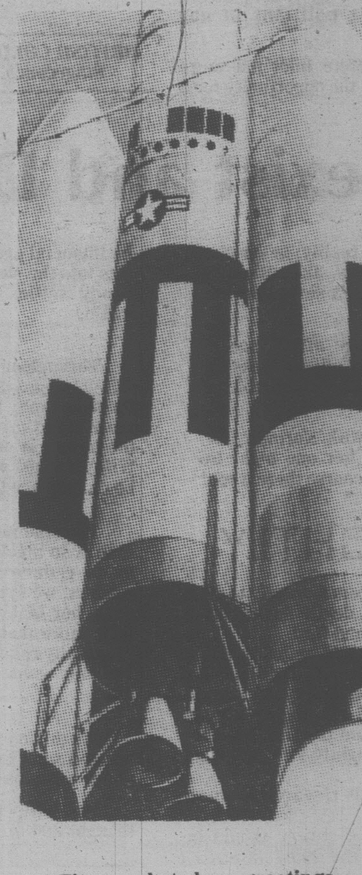
Voyager Gift Packs Include Whale Calls

By JULIAN REID

Late in the summer of 1977, two ponderous Titan rockets labored skywards from their earth-bound launch-pads at Florida's Kennedy Spaceflight Centre. As part of their payloads, they bore two identical aluminum-encased gift packages, dispatched on behalf of all mankind to our fellow citizens of the universe.

Each consisted of a gold-plated LP record, on the cover of which was inscribed an esoteric design, distantly reminiscent of those famous Pioneer-10 and -11 plaques which were humanity's first formal greeting-cards to the inhabitants of unknown worlds.

The contents of the two special 16⅔ RPM records included an 87½-minute compilation of music from around the world, a unique, evolutionary audio-profile The Sound of Earth, videophonically encoded transcriptions of 116 selected photographs of our planet and its inhabitants (both human and non-human), and spoken greetings to the cosmos in 55 assorted languages, ranging from ancient Sumerian to modern American-English — along with several minutes of hauntingly rapturous salutations from one of our distant cousins, the mighty humpback whale.



Titan rockets bore greetings

Language Salutations

Primarily, of course, the two Voyager spacecraft which carry these treasures were launched as scientific probes — automated instrument-packages designed to scout the shadowy outer reaches of our solar system and transmit their findings back to the waiting scientists on earth. But afterwards, its appointed tasks performed, each will go hurtling onwards out into the vacant depths of interstellar space.

Yet there remains the chance, perhaps just one in a billion, that some day, millenia hence, one or the other of the two will be partner in a fortuitous rendezvous with a party of alien space-explorers. And it was with this remote possibility in mind that this phonographic time-capsule was first conceived of, as a last-minute afterthought — and then hastily assembled by the members of the NASA Voyager Record Committee, under the imaginative chairmanship of astronomer Carl Sagan.

For Man in the Street

For the man [illegible] the street, as opposed to the less romantic professional scientist, it is the 1¼-pound supercargo, rather than their massive primary payload of arcanely intricate instrumentation, that represents the real and enduring significance of the two Voyager missions. And it is on his behalf that Carl Sagan and his collaborators have compiled Murmurs of Earth, a richly illustrated memorial volume which first recounts the background and history of the Voyager record, and then moves on to an item-by-item description of its contents and their significance, in full and fascinating detail.

The pictures, along with their commentaries, can speak for themselves. As for the 27 musical selections, ranging from a 2,500-year-old Chinese Ch'in solo through Peruvian panpipes, a Bach prelude, and a Bulgarian folk-song to Chuck Berry's soulfully urbanized rhythm-and-blues, they remain, alas, achingly mute — but Timothy Ferris' intensely evocative notes on them nevertheless succeed admirably in communicating an almost tangible yearning for the privilege of actually hearing this rich assemblage of sounds.

All in all, then, Murmurs of Earth is a uniquely suggestive self-portrait of man and his world — and one that should provide every reader with plentiful food for thought.

After all, most people would be willing enough to endorse the inclusion of a photograph of the Taj Mahal — but how many would have opted, as the Voyager record committee did, to send a view of the Toronto International Airport winging its way to the stars? Especially when none of the enduring masterpieces of painting or sculpture has been included along with it?

Certainly, there is fertile ground here for hours of argument! In fact, as a provoker of casual and not-so-casual conversation, Murmurs of Earth has the average coffee-table volume beaten by a margin of several light-years.

What Are We Doing Here?

For, above all, what makes the Voyager record noteworthy is the stirring philosophical challenge it poses for all of us here on earth. What are we doing here, anyway, all four billion of us, the proliferating offspring of this blue and bountiful world? Where do we come from and whither are we bound? And what sort of face do we want to put on ourselves and our activities, when at last we find ourselves confronting the gaze of alien eyes?

MURMURS OF EARTH: The Voyager Interstellar Record, by Carl Sagan and others. Random House. $19.50.

History of B.C.'s Blacker Moments

Or How Frontier Hardiness Overcomes Many Disasters

By TERRY de MARCH

Floods, fires, epidemics, massacres, and shipwrecks are the order of the day in local author Derek Pethick's latest historical offering, British Columbia Disasters.

The introduction to Pethick's book boldly claims that "the history of British Columbia disasters is in effect the history of British Columbia . . .". More realistically, the author has isolated and melded a collection of events to produce an effect which borders on sensationalism — borders, because Pethnick does relate the time and place of his disasters with anecdotes and images of British Columbia life.

Pethick presents B.C.'s finest examples of death and destruction with ample dosages of moralization on the sturdiness of British Columbia stock, and their ability to face the future with renewed vigor after each successive calamity. Chronologically catalogued, these disasters are recounted with careful consideration to the statistical details of loss of life and property.

The mood of the book is established in the initial chapter dealing with the smallpox epidemic of 1862. Pethic envisages this catastrophe as the downfall of the Indian race in B.C.

"More than numbers perished in the great disaster of 1862; a way of life, in which each knew his place in both his tribe and the universe, had also suffered shipwreck. Perhaps if there had been no epidemic, an accommodation might gradually have taken place between the age-old native ways and the customs brought by the white man; but the double pressure of the epidemic and the coming of new lords to the land had proved too much to withstand, and even those whose bodies remained healthy were often left sick in spirit."

The more descriptive details of the death of the 20,000 natives are not spared by Pethick, and such details are similarly captured in quotes from eye witnesses to the Indians' "moment of revenge" — the Bute Inlet massacre.

British Columbia Disasters is rife with personalities from the infamous to the popular politians of our past.

The Bute Inlet massacre creates the opportunity for a brief biography of Alfred Waddington, as does the Nanaimo mine disaster of 1882 for an outline of the life of Robert Dunsmuir.

Dunsmuir of Vancouver Island fame is the epitome of the rags-to-riches success story: "born in humble circumstances . . . left an orphan at an early age . . . had hopes of making the fortune which would make possible the castle he had promised his wife . . ." Even a touch of pathos is evident as Dunsmuir dies just prior to the completion of his dream castle.

Of further interest to Victorians are the collapse of the Point Ellice bridge, and the great Victoria fire of 1910; which if nothing else inspires a few thoughts on the heritage of B.C.'s capital city.

The loss of the S.S. Pacific and the Princess Sophia, the Fraser Valley Floods, and the influenza epidemic of 1918 are all to be found in British Columbia Disasters. Found by those, at least, who wish a glimpse at the blackest moments of B.C.'s past.

BRITISH COLUMBIA DISASTERS, by Derek Pethick. Stagecoach. $10.95.

Often Hilarious . . . Also Sexist and Depressing

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

Sandy Pressman — thirty-two, mother of two children (boy and girl), wife of Norman the drycleaning entrepreneur — is unhappy.

She's unhappy with herself, with her suburban New Jersey life and with, especially, Norman, a laconic tennis nut whose most meaningful contact with his wife is five minutes in bed on a Saturday night.

But Sandy's sex life, which comes to assume an importance far beyond its intrinsic value as her marriage deteriorates, is limited only in reality: in her own mind it runs riot, and much of Wifey, Judy Blume's latest novel, is concerned with Sandy's sexual desires and fantasies.

And so the author provides page after page of graphic detail as Sandy, like so many others, looks for an answer to the problems — or is it only one problem? — of her life.

In the end, though, she stays with Norman. He, don't you see, proves his love for her one night by belting her across the mouth. And of course there would be financial problems involved in a divorce. As the sun sets into the west, then, and this depressing novel ends, Sandy settles down into being a good little wifey again.

Throughout, Judy Blume plays the story for laughs. Wifey is consistently funny, often hilarious, and though its humor may be a balm to those of us suffering one or more of the variations of the theme struck in this novel, the humor is often based on a foundation that makes Wifey a sexist work in the same way other novels might be called racist or anti-Semitic.

Thus the male characters with which Sandy Pressman is so much concerned are rendered in such terms as to reduce them to caricatures. And while, as readers, we sympathize to a point with Sandy's experience, her inability to see the oppressors in her life as little more than marionettes devoid of flesh and blood eventually rebounds to own disadvantage. In the end we feel only sadness — for Sandy and all the people in her life.

It's difficult to tell how much the author consciously created such lives and situations. Judy Blume may be either a genius or a hack.

But Wifey is readable at least, and may engender thought and feeling far beyond its author's intent.

WIFEY, by Judy Blume. Longman. $11.75.

FIRST NOVELIST'S LIGHT SHINES BRIGHTLY

With books flowing off the industry presses at an ever-increasing rate, and no respite in sight, it is heartening to find new novelists of merit cropping up with some regularity. The percentage of real talent against potboilers remains low, yet hope remains.

A shining ray of light is James Parry, a young New York advertising executive, who shows real promise in his first novel, The Discovery. The discovery that he writes about is a cure for cancer — a startling premise for a novel by any standards. Yet Parry carries it off with real aplomb.

Dr. Paul Justin, an unsung hero in the fight for the holy grail of medical research, falls into success almost overnight, pursuing a line of research long pooh-poohed by his more illustrious colleagues. By a series of coincidences, a pharmaceutical firm teetering on the brink of bankruptcy and an investigative reporter learn of Justin's success. Both show interest, two officials of the firm planning to steal the discovery and kill Justin, while Frank Lattimer is interested only in the story.

A rather unbelieveable plot, you say? Too true. Yet somehow Parry weaves a maze of characters spread all around the U.S. together into a tightly knit, gripping yarn.

THE DISCOVERY, by James Parry. Crowell. $14.95.

Breathtaking Tutankhamun Adventure Told Step-by-Step and with Gusto

No one, either those fortunate enough to have viewed the recent exhibition in Seattle or some of the treasures taken from the tomb of King Tutankhamun, or those unfortunate enough to have missed it, can fail to be interested in Tutankhamun: The Untold Story. The exhibition — one of many staged in museums throughout the United States — was the glorious swanson of the book's author, Thomas Hoving, who prior to his retirement was head of New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art.

The standard work on the subject was written by the tomb's discoverer, British archaeologist Howard Carter, and there have been countless other stories and accounts. The plain facts regarding the discovery and excavation are in themselves so moving and breathtaking that, presumably, no one was motivated to delve more deeply into it. Until now.

Hoving, convinced that the entire truth had not been revealed, never ceased to seek new facts to support his conviction. Eventually, after a prodigious amount of research, he discovered previously untapped sources — old records, diaries and correspondence — in the archives of his own museum!

An upsurge in acquisitiveness and nationalism has traditionally followed every major archaeological discovery, so no one will be surprised to learn that the "untold story" concerns bitter intrigues, power struggles and myriad scandals. The big difference, in this instance, is that the events that followed the uncovering of Tutankhamun's tomb on November 26, 1922, changed forever the course of archaeological expeditions.

Ever since 1922, foreigners and adventurers have been unable to simply walk in and appropriate whatever they could find of ancient civilizations. Fair enough. But this has had a negative effect because with nations like Greece and Egypt unable to find their own experts and their own funds to mount costly expeditions, which may not discover anything, all major work has ceased. Outsiders are not interested in spoils in which they cannot share.

Hoving, who writes extremely well, tells with gusto the step-by-step tale of the most important and splendid discovery in the history of modern archaeology: how the find revealed four burial chambers so filled with priceless objects of gold and alabaster and lapis lazuli and onyx that it took years to remove the nearly five thousand dazzling works of art from the underground tomb. But his chief interest lies with the strange and colorful characters who played the star roles in the adventure.

There's Howard Carter, genius and fanatic, who for six years persisted in his quest despite unbearable heat, insects, laborious digging, and the ridicule of those who assured him there was nothing more to be found in the Valley of the Kings. No one could fault his skill but, unfortunately, this impetuous and volatile man had a pronounced aptitude for enraging everyone: the Egyptian authorities, other archaeologists and the world's press.

The benefactor, the wealthy Lord Carnarvon, backed Carter with his own money for six years, but died soon after the night he and Carter illicitly entered he tomb for the first time and then concealed their entry.

Another leading character in the drama was the French Jesuit Pierre Lacau, head of the Antiquities Service in Cairo, who became Carter's personal nemesis. As rival for the treasure he succeeded in his determination to ruin Carter and to deny him his claim to the contents of the tomb.

Carter had the full support of the directors of New York's Metropolitan Museum, but they were no match for the politically astute ministers in the new Egyptian nationalist government who backed Lacau to the hilt. However, thanks to collusion and foul play, Carter and Carnarvon acted as middlemen for the American museum and the Tutankhamun treasures on display there to this day are the result of the jiggery-pokery that took place, which Hoving rather gleefully discloses for the first time.

Carter's most stupid error was in granting exclusive rights to the story to The Times, of London. Journalists who flocked to Luxor from all over the world were excluded from the tomb site, and the resultant animosity hastened Carter's downfall.

As fascinating as this behind-the-scenes drama is, it is transcended, in my opinion, by the oft-told but still wildly exciting story of the find and excavation of the tomb and treasures of the boy king who reigned more than three thousands years ago when the Hebrews were captives in Egypt and when their leader, Moses, had not yet been born. These were the days when the kings of Egypt dominated the then-known world.

The monumental irony is that while, thanks to Carter's discovery, Tutankhamun has become a household name throughout the civilized world no one knows anything about him because no historical writings, documents or papyri have been discovered. The theory is that, on religious grounds, a successor, King Harembad, ordered the systematic destruction of all references to the boy king, who may well have had a presentiment for on the inmost coffin were inscribed his words: "I have seen yesterday; I know tomorrow."

Hoving clearly entertains a great respect for Carter, as well he might, and he had dipped liberally into Carter's own account of his ten-year venture. Happily, he has lightened some of Carter's more ponderous prose whilst at the same time retaining its lyrical passages.

The story is repeated of how when Carter hoisted the stone lid from the sarcophagus and removed the linen shrouds to reveal a golden effigy of the king, he was deeply affected by also finding amid all the regal splendor a few withered flowers that still retained a tinge of color after 3,200 years.

Carter was also the first modern to see the face of Tutankhamun, and when he held the preserved head in his hands he said he felt himself transported back to the time when the young king had been vibrantly alive. This incredible experience, as well as countless others, is repeated in detail by Hoving.

The saddest part of Hoving's story is his description of what has happened to the treasure trove. Apart from the beautiful objects, lovingly displayed in the Metropolitan Museum and the Brooklyn Museum all the treasures are housed in the Egyptian Museum of Antiquities in Cairo. The works of art are in filthy glass cases, placed in disorder on the second floor in dirty, unpainted halls covered with dust and sand.

Hoving reports that some of the supreme treasures are identified by labels brown with age, wrinkled and virtually unreadable. No guidebook exists for the collection.

Hundreds upon hundreds of objects, including the magnificent canopic shrine with its four sublime goddesses, are deteriorating, cracking apart, dying. And no Egyptian government has ever seen fit to supply the desperately needed funds to preserve or repair the collection. Hoving calls the condition of the Tutankhamun treasures "a human and institutional disgrace."

Hoving is to be congratulated for writing a riveting account of a thrilling and unique happening, a story about incredible treasure and breathtaking beauty, as well as an account of adventure and intrigue, and about the dogged, complex and interesting men who struggled for the treasure and were, in the end, overwhelmed by it.

The book has a 32-page section of carefully chosen photographs in color and black-and-white, and an excellent index. Taken altogether, it is a most satisfying effort, eminently worthy of its subject.

Groucho Book Falls on Its Face

GROUCHO MARX . . . in his hey-day

Were he still alive, Groucho would doubtless joke about the book.

Hector Arce has done something that seems, at first glance, quite amazing. Despite obvious admiration for Groucho Marx and access to a wealth of information about him, Arce has written a biography that is neither funny nor revealing.

Marx himself heightened the confusion or fusion of image and man. Several letters quoted in the book are signed by the movie character name, Hackenbush.

And Hackenbush is funny, but only in smallish doses — great at a dinner party, a bit tedious on a long cruise and pure hell if you end up shipwrecked on an unpopulated island. He is funny only when removed from those around him by imagination and celluloid.

Abandon those barriers and a scared, even haunted man is exposed, a man who struggled to hold the demons at bay with wild practical jokes and flashes of brilliance. According to Arce, he led a life marked by a domineering and cold mother, three failed marriages, two alcoholic ex-wives, children who grew up basically to ignore him and a dirty little court battle over his relative senility.

Is that a serious remark or a joke? The answer seems to be both, and somewhere within that combination is a reasonable definition of paths.

Arce doesn't even really try. He comes upon hard truths and then sidesteps them, allowing the people he interviewed to draw conclusions for him.

As a result, the book ends up being a jumble. Stories and one-liners (you can crack a lot of jokes in 85 years) are strung together with a few thoughts on the man, the times and the evolution of entertainment thrown in.

Arce can never decide what kind of book he is writing and therefore produces an ill-reasoned grab bag called Groucho.

THE DOG CRISIS

By JUDITH BURKETT

The mystique of the dog, as companion, trusted friend and unfailing partner is deeply rooted in the human psyche. Dogs have hunted with us, gone to war with us and guarded our possessions. Still they work and fight for us, lead our blind, find us when we're lost. We would never be without the dog. And neither would Iris Nowell.

The Dog Crisis spends some time tracing the history of the dog as human counterpart. Since the breakup of large families following the First World War, pets have become cherished household members, particularly as companions for the elderly and for young children. As promoted by the media, dogs have become symbols of prestige, elegance, even virility. A dog is a tremendous flatterer. Growl at your staff, beat your wife, throw your children out and your dog still greets you as the conquering hero.

We have been conditioned to see the dog as exclusively good, yet a recent symposium in Detroit described straying or uncontrolled dogs as fitting the definition of "vermin." There are simply too many dogs. With the present U.S. population at about 65 million and the birth rate at 35 million pups, there is legitimate cause for alarm.

Some 15 million healthy dogs are destroyed every year. Three tons of food fit for humans is processed annually into pet food. The U.S. wild horse population was ravaged to provide some pooch with his yummies. Every day some 187 tons of faeces are deposited on the streets of New York City alone. (The recent "pooper-scooper" laws of that city may have modified the situation there.)

A number of diseases of dogs are transmissible to humans with results from minor to fatal. Attacks on humans, especially children, and predation of both livestock and wild animals by domestic dogs are on the rise. All is not as it should be.

As usual, money is the real problem. Dogs are enormously profitable. The 1977 sales figures for the U.S. pet food industry are estimated at a staggering $3 billion! Accessories — from flea powder to gold earrings — brought in another $804 million. While income from legitimate dog breeding is not impressive, fortunes are made by "backyard breeders" and "puppy mills."

Puppy millers are defined as "breeders who put dogs, purported to be purebreds, on the market . . . by the thousands solely as a means of making a fast buck." In 1976, producing about 25 to 30 million pups, these opportunists raked in over $300 million. "Filth, disease, overcrowding, lack of food and water, dubious veterinary care . . ." describes these places where "perhaps fifty dogs" are kept in pens and chicken runs. The bitches are bred every heat season until they drop dead of exhaustion.

As "hobbyists" these breeders are not licensed. Their lack of concern for the principles of genetics are directly responsible for the degeneration of many breeds. Quality counts for nothing and no thought is given to the welfare of the dog. At four weeks of age, puppies are shipped off in crates without food or water. It is estimated that perhaps half the papers accompanying them to pet shops are fraudulent.

The Dog Crisis also takes aim at the pet food industry with some truths about dog foods. It would seem that John Q. Public has been lied to again. (In case you're interested, Canadian pet foods hold up better than the American varieties.) But the most pernicious aspects of the industry is the advertising. If dogs are big money, more dogs are bigger money and big dogs are bigger money yet. Along with the pet food, advertising is selling the dog.

Large, sleek dogs bound free through pastoral settings. Cuddly wide-eyed puppies are shown as the answer to a boy's deepest desires. There is no attempt to deal with the real problems of dog-owning, nor any implication that any responsibility is involved. There are no leashes; there is no attempt to promote smaller breeds; and there is certainly no suggestion of the time, effort and expense that go along with the proper care of the family mutt.

There are problems with the book. Facts and figures are couched in terms whch make them sound worse than they already are. Ms. Nowell is to some extent caught up in the very emotionalism which she rightly points to as a major hurdle in the way of responsible regulation of dogs. She may genuinely love dogs, but she is angry and it shows.

The Dog Crisis is not literature and not a scientific report. Nor should it be. But it is readable, eye-opening and thought-provoking. Though some of the book's conclusions may be arguable, there is nothing to offend responsible dog owners and much to be learned.
